New York Republicans Nominate Dewey for Governor

Renounces Presidential Plans for 1944; Backs Efforts to Win the War

Says He Will Devote Next Four Years Exclusively To Service as Governor, if Elected

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 24 (AP)—Thomas E. Dewey accepted the Republican nomination for governor of New York tonight with a renunciation, if elected, of any presidential aspirations in 1944.

The former Manhattan district attorney, who lost the party's presidential nomination to Wendell L. Willkie in 1940, made his declaration immediately after a cheering state convention had nominated him by acclamation for a three-cornered gubernatorial race.

Dewey has been considered by political observers an almost certain candidate for the presidential nomination, whose chances would be enhanced by election to the New York governorship. Presidential candidates will be named in 1944 midway in the next gubernatorial term.

Referring to the Democratic convention in Brooklyn last week as "a personal political fight for control of the 1944 Democratic convention," Dewey said:

Not White House Candidate
"By contrast, neither you nor I are here concerned with 1944. This convention and the Republican campaign are concerned only with the winning of the war and with good government for the people of the state of New York for the next four years. For my part, let me say right now, that I shall devote the next four years exclusively to the service of the people of New York state."

Germany Doubtful Of War Success

No Longer Jubilant Over Prospects, Booklet Declares

LONDON, Aug. 24 (AP)—Increasing hammer blows of Allied air power are beginning to make Germany doubtful of the outcome of the war, the RAF stated tonight in its third booklet recording historical phases of the war.

"This is an interim report," the booklet entitled "Bomber Command Continues" declared. "The enemy is not defeated—yet. He certainly is no longer exultant. It may be that he is beginning to feel doubtful of what the end will be."

The publication explains that Britain was forced to build from scratch plants to produce new heavy bombers and train personnel for the plants. It noted that British aircraft alone bombed Cologne, the Ruhr and Bremen with 1,000-plane flights.

"If so much can be achieved by a force armed with British aircraft, nearly all of them manned by British and Empire crews, it surely is possible to hope for great things when the airforce of America begins to fly side by side with them toward the same targets," the booklet said.

Both Axis and Allies Believed Planning Early Action in Egypt

By NOLAND NORGARD
LONDON, Aug. 24 (AP)—Increased air activity over the Egyptian desert and continued Axis efforts to get convoys across the Mediterranean led tonight to renewed speculation over the possibility of another offensive by German Marshal Erwin Rommel.

The Italians have repeatedly intimated that the present lull in the desert fighting would end soon. Today the Rome radio said that "a hurricane of death may be unleashed any moment."

Bahr Convicted Of Conspiracy; Sentence Sept. 2

Former Buffalo Scholar May Get Death Penalty in New Jersey

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 24 (AP)—A federal court jury which deliberated only two hours and five minutes today convicted Herbert Karl Friedrich Bahr of conspiracy to commit espionage, and Judge William F. Smith said he would sentence the former Buffalo, N. Y., scholar September 2 at 10 a. m. (eastern time).

The bespectacled, neatly-dressed defendant, who displayed little emotion during the six days of his trial, merely dropped his head and swallowed hard when the jury of six men and six women announced its verdict at 6 p. m. The charge carries a maximum penalty of death or imprisonment up to thirty years.

Appeal To Be Taken
Frederic M. P. Pearce, Bahr's court-appointed counsel who had asked the jury not to "visit the sins of the apostates of that human race on the head of this young man," said an appeal would be taken.

Many Casualties In Peru 'Quake

LIMA, Peru, Aug. 24 (AP)—Many persons were killed and injured and heavy damage done to property by an earthquake which rocked southern Peru today.

Reports reaching Lima from Nazca, 325 miles south of the capital, said damage and casualties were heavy in that area. Another report from Ica said the steeple of the Church of Our Lord of Luren collapsed. Another church at Ica was said to have been destroyed also.

A strong tremor, lasting about two minutes, was felt at Lima at 5:53 p. m. (6:53 p. m. E. W. T.), but there was no damage or casualties here.

Big Axis Banks In Brazil Taken Over by Decree

Have Assets of Nearly $35,000,000; 17 Ships Confiscated

By HENRY W. BAGLEY
RIO DE JANEIRO, Aug. 24 (AP)—Three of the largest Axis-owned banks in Brazil, with assets of nearly $35,000,000, were closed tonight by a war-time presidential decree which also ordered the outright confiscation of seventeen Axis vessels.

The seizure of the vessels was ordered about the time the government announced the sinking of the American tanker Louisiana, the twentieth ship by official count, to be sunk by Axis submarines. It was carrying a cargo of oil to Rio de Janeiro.

As the country welcomed indications of South American solidarity from Argentina, Peru and Uruguay, she turned also to the grim job of building defenses in the strategic Natal bulge and hunting down submarines along the coast.

Informed sources said the government shortly would order a general mobilization of the army and confiscate additional German and Italian property.

Three Banks Closed
The German Trans-Atlantic Bank, the German Bank of South America and the French Italian Bank of South America were closed and liquidators were named. A presidential decree said the wealth of the banks "which no longer have reason for existence among us" would be distributed among the shareholders, with quotas belonging to Germans or Italians living abroad subject to confiscation.

Chinese Occupy Japanese Base In Kiangsi Area

Recapture Linchwan and Smash to within 30 Miles of Nanchang

By SPENCER MOOSA
CHUNGKING, Aug. 24 (AP)—The recapture of Linchwan (Fuchow), second biggest Japanese base in Kiangsi province, was announced tonight by the Chinese high command, while other Chinese forces smashed to within thirty miles of Nanchang, the invaders' main Kiangsi stronghold.

Eastward to the Chekiang province border the Chinese held a regained 115-mile segment of the important Nanchang-Hangchow rail line, and on into Chekiang they pressed in new drives that menaced Japanese-held Chuhsien and Lishui sites of air bases upon which Tokyo could be bombed.

Hard Blow to Japs
Thus in a resurgence of offensive operations, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's forces either invalidated or threatened the chief fruits of the Japanese summer campaign in the two key provinces.

There was no tendency among Chinese observers, however, to attribute the new gains solely to the prowess of Chinese arms.

Private reports received here indicated that the Japanese were withdrawing considerable forces from parts of the Chinese front, leaving only garrison detachments in some places.

These reports said most of the forces withdrawn from Chekiang and Kiangsi were being moved south (whence operations against South China, Australia or India might be based), and the rest north of Man- (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

Morgenthau Violates Federal Statute

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24 (AP)—These war stamp salesgirls are clever, as Secretary Morgenthau can testify.

The treasury head displayed today in the lapel of his coat a boutonniere made up of a paper flower and some war stamps.

He related that a girl approached him at Roanoke, Va., a few days ago and asked him if he wanted one. After he said he did, he found out it cost $1.

Reminded that the secretary of treasury is prohibited by law from buying securities, he said he hoped no one prosecuted him.

VICHY PROTEST TO U. S. RAIDS ANSWERED BY FORTRESS CREWS

LONDON, Aug. 24 (AP)—The United States high command in England ignoring the protest of the Vichy government against last Monday's raid on Rouen in occupied France sent flying Fortresses back to the vicinity to attack Nazi shipyards at Le Trait today in the fourth daylight bombing of French territory in eight days.

The big bombers, escorted by fighters of the RAF, the U. S. air force and the Polish air force, all reached their target on the Seine river near Rouen, and all returned to their bases as in the previous raids.

They again proved their ability to cope with the German Focke-Wulf 190 fighter, reputed to be one of the best in the air. One of the Fortresses encountered one of these planes on the return trip, and a small number of her crew were wounded, but she got back to her base.

Four Japanese Planes Downed

GEN. MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia, Tuesday, Aug. 25 (AP)—Four of a group of thirteen Japanese fighter planes encountered over eastern New Guinea were shot down by Allied fighters and others were damaged, a communiqué announced today.

One allied plane was damaged, but returned to its base. Another Japanese fighter plane was set on fire and "probably destroyed" when two Japanese craft sought to intercept an Allied reconnaissance unit over Rabaul, New Britain, the communiqué said.

Laval Protests Blasting of Rouen By Americans in Flying Fortresses

Raises Question of French Attitude toward Allied Operations

By MEL MOST
VICHY, Aug. 24 (AP)—The Laval government has protested to the United States because American bombers blasted Rouen in German-occupied Northern France two days before the Dieppe raid, it was announced tonight.

The United States Flying Fortresses, in the attack last Monday, centered their bombs on the railway yards through which all coastal traffic from the east and south must be switched. French commentators have expressed belief that this was to prevent the Germans from swiftly bringing reinforcements to Dieppe, thirty-eight miles (Continued on Page 2, Col. 7)

American Planes Soon To Help in 'Softening' Nazis

Will Participate in Big Raids Preliminary to New Front

By WES GALLAGHER
LONDON, Aug. 24 (AP)—A big Anglo-American "aerial push" aimed at crippling Germany's western defenses to pave the way for a second front was foreseen by military observers tonight at the United States invasion army, swelling by the largest American convoy of the war, settled into battle training.

The warning of Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair that 1,000-bomber raids were due to "become less infrequent," coupled with the success of United States Flying Fortresses in precision bombing of the Nazi transportation system during daylight, pointed to a fall bombing offensive.

Study Dieppe Raid
Meanwhile, American and British high commands studied results of the Dieppe super-commando raid and compiled a report for Prime Minister Churchill who arrived back in England today from his trip to Moscow and the Middle East.

United States soldiers, taking their first leave in London, were greeted by huge posters calling for a "second front now."

"The success of the Flying Fortresses in daylight operations has given the Allies the weapon they have long needed. While the giant British night raids have been striking crushing blows at the Nazi home front and industry, they lacked the concise accuracy needed to wipe out isolated targets which can be obtained only during daylight."

Armed Africans Come to Rescue Of 41 Americans

Nude and Carrying Knives, They Befriend Ship Survivors

AN EAST COAST PORT, Aug. 24 (AP)—Forty-one survivors of a United States ship, sunk late in June in the Indian ocean, landed on a wild African beach to be greeted by armed, nude natives who acted "not like savages but like gentlemen."

Capt. W. W. Kuhne, skipper of the torpedoed ship, reported his men feared a fight when they saw the wicked knives carried by the natives, but instead they received a friendly welcome, were fed and helped back to civilization.

14 Men Missing
Two torpedoes which the captain believed came from a motor torpedo boat sank the vessel. In the act of abandoning ship, one lifeboat was upset and fourteen men, including two of the ten-man naval gun crew, are missing.

The survivors assembled in one lifeboat, abandoning two others, and were suffering from thirst and hunger, on reaching land seven days later.

Captain Kuhne of Staten Island, N. Y., said they had to pass through a rough surf and were afraid they wouldn't make it.

"But we started on in," he continued, "and then about twenty natives came on the beach to watch us land. They had big knives hanging from belts. The belts were the only clothing they wore."

Natives Are Friendly
"We were really worried, but we decided to test them to see if they were friendly. As soon as we were close enough we tossed a rope. They rushed up and helped us beach the (Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

Berlin Hopes To Keep Argentina, Chile Neutral

BERN, Switzerland, Aug. 24 (AP)—Now that Brazil has declared war on Germany and Italy, Germany will concentrate her efforts in South America toward continued neutrality of Argentina and Chile, the Berlin correspondent of the Neue Zuercher Zeitung said today.

"Immediately reaction to the Brazilian declaration of war by other South American countries is not expected in Berlin," the correspondent wrote. "Berlin is interested that the state of neutrality of Argentina and Chile not be involved."

Commission Acts To Dissolve Big Holding Company

Takes Another Step To Break Up Electric Bond and Share

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 24 (AP)—In another step toward breaking up the nation's largest single public utility holding company system, the Securities and Exchange Commission today ordered dissolution of American Power and Light Company and Electric Power and Light Company, major units of the Electric Bond and Share Corporation system.

In a 100-page decision strongly displaying its determination to enforce the "death sentence" of the holding company act during the war, the SEC declared American and Electric were "scarcely more than a set of books in Bond and Share."

The command to dissolve the companies was "purely personal."

His name was not disclosed. The statement merely identified him as "a big Alabamian who before the war worked for five years in a New York bank."

Report 4,000 Nazis Slain at Dieppe
LONDON, Aug. 24 (AP)—The commander of the fighting French Commandos who participated in the Dieppe raid Aug. 19 estimated today that the Germans lost 4,000 men, including flying personnel, in the day's action.

The commander's estimate was described in a statement from fighting French headquarters as "purely personal."

His name was not disclosed. The statement merely identified him as "a big Alabamian who before the war worked for five years in a New York bank."

"Germany announced its losses were only a few hundred in the raid. Official British estimates have not been released."

Traveling Salesmen Demand More Gasoline as Protection to Jobs

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24 (AP)—Traveling salesmen from the seventeen gasoline-rationed Atlantic seaboard states demanded today the Office of Price Administration increase their motor fuel allotments, to remove what they said was the danger of losing their means of livelihood.

Spokesmen told Joel Dean, chief of the fuel rationing branch of OPA at a meeting, that an order restricting them to 470 miles of business driving a month would put many of them out of business, and cited a survey by the Baltimore Association of Commerce showing salesmen in that area required about 1,207 miles of vocational driving a month.

Willing To Take Cut
Senator Pepper (D-Fla.) proposed salesmen be allowed seventy-five per cent of their normal gasoline allotments, but three traveling salesmen organizations countered with a proposal asserting sixty-five per cent would be sufficient.

Fred C. Abbott of Richmond, Va., representing the three associations, also urged national gasoline Sunday service by Maj. William A. Howard, traveling salesman, which he held behind him as he waited for formalities, trembled.

Reach Point 40 Miles Northwest of Stalingrad and 85 Miles from Big Wells

By HENRY CASSIDY
MOSCOW, Tuesday, Aug. 25 (AP)—German tanks and mechanized infantry were acknowledged officially today to be forty-five miles northwest of Stalingrad after crossing the Don river bend, and in a fifty-mile Caucasian advance the Nazis reached a point only eighty-five miles from the rich Soviet oil city of Grozny.

"Particularly stiff fighting raged against enemy tank and mechanized infantry which had crossed to the left bank of the Don" northwest of Stalingrad, a communiqué said early today.

The Russians also were fighting desperately against "large tank and infantry forces which had driven a wedge into our positions" northeast of Kotelinsk, or on the southwestern approaches to the Volga industrial city of Stalingrad.

300 Germans Killed
Eleven German tanks, 300 Nazis, and two companies of Rumanians were destroyed and killed in the Kotelinsk sector, the communiqué said.

In the Caucasus the Germans had driven fifty miles southeast of Mineralnye Vody on the Rostov-Baku railway to reach Prokhladnenski, the communiqué said. The latter point is about the same distance southeast of Pravitorsk.

Soviet troops also fell back south of Krasnodar in a steady retreat towards Novorossisk. Black Sea port sixty miles away. Russian rear guards took a steady toll in the withdrawal, the Russians said.

The crossing of the Don northeast of Stalingrad was the most dangerous and immediate threat to (Continued on Page 2, Col. 5)

Tyrone Power Is In Marine Corps

Movie Star Enlists as Private; Nervous before Camera

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24 (AP)—Tyrone Power, 28, Hollywood movie star, got a bit fussed today over a scene he had never done before—taking the oath as a private in the United States Marines.

As movie camera men called out instructions and as reporters shoved about for a vantage spot in an office in the headquarters of the Marine Corps, Power took out his handkerchief, mopped his forehead, his hands.

"You aren't camera shy, are you, Tyrone?" a friend, Commander John Bergen of the navy, called from the sidelines.

"Well," replied the movie star, "I've never done this scene before." He was sworn in as a private in the Volunteer Marine Corps Reserve by Maj. William A. Howard, Tyrone's hands, which he held behind him as he waited for formalities, trembled.

According to present plans, Power will go on inactive status until October so that he can finish a navy picture.

His actress wife, Annabella, was in town, but she did not see him in town. "She is for it," Power said.

First Americans To Leave Japan Are Due Today

Liner Gripsholm To Dock at Jersey City This Morning

NEW YORK, Aug. 24 (AP)—The first Americans repatriated from Japan since the war began will reach Jersey City tomorrow morning aboard the diplomatic exchange liner Gripsholm, the Navy announced today.

Bearing 1,451 diplomats, including Ambassador Joseph C. Grew and his staff, newspapermen, missionaries and businessmen and their families, the ship is expected to dock at pier F of the American export line between 9 and 10 A. M. (Eastern War Time).

The Navy said the first passengers—United States diplomats—will begin to leave the ship at 11 A. M. The National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church said that among the missionaries returning from occupied China aboard the ship were:

Returning Missionaries
The Rev. and Mrs. Charles Higgins and their son, Charles, of Beckley, W. Va.; and the Rev. and Mrs. Claude L. Picken and five children, of Alexandria, Va.

A thorough investigation and search of each passenger will be made by the State and Justice departments, army and navy intelligence services and customs men, a process expected to take two or three days.

Attorney General Biddle announced at Washington that "every precaution must be taken to prevent enemy agents slipping across our borders. We already have had experience with them and we know them to be well trained and clever."

Close Watch For Enemies
Similar investigations of passengers aboard the Gripsholm, ex-changed ship which brought Americans from Europe, led to the arrest of Herbert Karl Friedrich Bahr, convicted today at Newark, N. J., on charges of conspiracy to commit espionage.

Stringent measures were announced to keep the public and the more than 1,200 relatives of passengers from the pier.

Harry M. Durning, collector of customs, warned that the public will not be permitted near the docked liner and advised relatives and friends of passengers to send messages through the American Red Cross and Social Security Board. Representatives of the latter will add passengers to reach their destinations.

Miss Edna J. Wakefield, director of the New York Red Cross chapter's home service, said nearly 1,000 messages had been received for delivery to passengers.

Recruits Are Wanted To Take Radio Repair Work Course

A representative of the United States Civil Service Commission will be at the post office today to recruit men for the army signal corps course in radio repair work. These courses are taught locally at Port Hill high school and trainees are paid $1,000 per year while in training.

Applications will be taken also for positions as junior repairmen for radio. Persons who have had six months of experience in radio or the equivalent in training are eligible for these positions at a starting salary of $1,440 per year. They are given advanced training at the Army Signal Service School.

Howard D. Blank, assistant civilian training administrator, will interview persons eligible for either of these courses. He will be at the post office from Thursday, August 27 to September 1. New classes in radio repair work are expected to begin September 16.

Soldier Voting Bill Delayed

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24 (AP)—Controversial amendments to the bill permitting servicemen to vote by mail, and lack of a quorum to pass upon them, bogged the measure down in the Senate today for a third time.

Despite a weekend summons from Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky for absent senators to return, only forty answered "present" to a roll call climaxing three and a half hours of debate and the matter went over until tomorrow.

"I'm getting a little fed up with the horseplay on this bill," Barkley remarked.

Barkley demanded the quorum call in connection with an amendment which would override state law tax requirements and permit soldiers to vote without paying such levies even though their home states might require them of other voters.

Special Gas Tanks Declared Illegal

BALTIMORE, Aug. 24 (AP)—State OPA attorney Reuben Oppenheimer said today he believed reported practices of having special oversized gasoline tanks attached to motor cars in order to fill them in unrationed areas "would be considered illegal."

"If the practice of having standard gasoline tanks removed from cars and replacing them with the larger size tanks has started, it is in my opinion, illegal," Oppenheimer said.

"As far as I know," he continued, "no official proof of the practice has come to the OPA office, and, while I know of no section of the law that covers it, the practice looks to me like an attempt to beat the ration law, and I feel the OPA would consider it a very serious matter."

and four German ships totalling about 90,000 tons become outright property of Brazil. Some of the vessels already have been used as Brazilian ships with new names. The largest German vessel involved was the 16,662-ton Windhuik which was sabotaged by her own crew while interned at Santos and is now being repaired.

The Argentine cabinet was reported considering a presidential decree granting Brazil non-belligerent status in her two-day-old war on Germany and Italy provoked by depredations of their submarines against Brazilian ships.

Peru Backs Brazil
Peru declared Brazil non-belligerent, a move that grants Brazilian liners, warships and other forces the same rights in war as in peace. Neighboring Uruguay sent planes of her tiny air force to hunt two submarines reported lurking the mouth of the broad Plate river, where the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee was scuttled nearly two years ago.

Argentina granted the United States a non-belligerent status soon after Pearl Harbor attack and there appeared no likelihood that Brazil would be denied like treatment.

Aside from this, there was no sign of Argentina's wavering from isolationist President Ramon Castillo's policy of "prudent neutrality," despite attacks already on at least three of her ships. Argentina and Chile are the only South American countries maintaining relations with the Axis.

Other Nations To Join
The Brazilian foreign ministry and various South American embassies were exceptionally active amid general reports that other nations on the continent would swiftly follow Peru in naming Brazil a non-belligerent. Many informed diplomats predicted Uruguay might soon go to war, and there were similar forecasts about Colombia, and Venezuela.

No immediate action came from Chile, which has been veering toward a rupture of relations with the Axis.

Brazil's 46,000,000, angry people relaxed into calm, watchful waiting. A few attacks on German and Italian restaurants and stores were reported in Rio De Janeiro.

Frantic efforts of some Italians and Germans to escape southern Brazil into Uruguay were thwarted by swift reinforcement of Uruguayan police and army forces, who turned back many.

Brazilian airlines—many supplied by the United States under lease-lend—watched coastal waters for any enemy submarine that might show its periscope.

Aviators Locate Missing Sloop

Elsie T. with Party from
Chevy Chase Is Found
Safe

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Aug. 24 (AP)—The Severn River naval command announced tonight that one of its observation planes located the missing Elsie T., 32-foot sloop, owned by Edgar Thompson, 39, of Chevy Chase, Md., near Poplar Isle and Bloody Point.

The sloop, which cleared Galesville, Md., yesterday afternoon, with Thompson and five others aboard, was taken into tow by a naval academy patrol boat and returned to Galesville.

Except for a "bit of sea-sickness" none of the passengers, including two women, suffered injury, naval officials reported.

Besides Thompson, members of the party were the owner's wife, Elsie, 34, John Phillips, 32, and A. M. Turner, 35, roomers in Thompson's home; Carl Kellbeck, 21, and Miss Sarah McDonnell, 19, both of Chevy Chase.

Naval officials said the observation plane landed beside the sloop and, discovering all hands were safe, radioed for the patrol boat. Besides the plane, scores of Chesapeake Bay craft, coast guard cutters from the Curtis Bay, Md., station and state conservation boats searched for the missing sloop for more than twelve hours today.

The party first was discovered missing by employees of the Hartge boat yard, Galesville, where Thompson keeps the Elsie T. Failure of the party to return to the automobile which brought them to Galesville caused the workers to sound the alarm this morning.

The sloop was believed to have encountered a storm several hours after setting out on a Sunday cruise down the bay.

It was also decided to make the organization a permanent one and a steering committee of two representatives for the CIO, AP of L, Railroad Brotherhoods, Brewery Workers and the Typographical Union will be set up to map the organization's future moves.

The conference is designed to further the political action of labor unions in a way which will benefit labor movement, O'Rourke stated. Another meeting has been scheduled for Friday night at 8 o'clock in Textile hall. Permanent officers may be elected at this time.

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, Aug. 24 (AP)—A German bomber twice attacked an Icelandic fishing trawler off the northwestern coast today, killing one member of the crew.

Another German bomber was over northeastern Iceland today and one over southeastern Iceland yesterday. Neither attacked.

Aided by Americans
The Chinese had laid siege for two weeks to Linchuan, on the Fu river sixty miles southeast of Nanchang. In the early stages of the onslaught Chinese ground forces were supported by United States army air force bombers which smashed at the Japanese defenses.

The Japanese had held the city since early in June when it fell to their drive along the Fu river toward Pukien province to the south. A communiqué on the capture of Linchuan said the city was attacked from several different directions by Chinese forces which reached its walls yesterday at dawn.

The attack was pressed on into the streets of the city and by dusk the invaders had suffered more than 700 casualties and were retreating to the north, closely pursued, the war bulletin said.

The Chinese thrust toward Nanchang was developing around the southern shore of Poyang Lake, just east of the city. Chinese forces were reported pressing hard on Juihung, thirty miles east of Nanchang, and Chinese dispatches said the fall of Juihung was expected shortly.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

But for the successful last ditch of Moscow and Leningrad, the doom of Stalingrad would appear almost inevitable on the face of discouraging reports from the Caucasus.

At two more points, the invaders have managed at last to ram armored spearheads across the Don river, only forty or fifty miles from the vital Volga City and its last remaining natural defense line. Ahead of the Nazis is the narrow corridor between the two rivers, sloping downward to terrain which is below sea level.

Already Stalingrad has been largely isolated, the single through rail connection with Moscow and the north having been severed by bombing, the Germans assert. Nazi planes are attacking shipping on the Volga.

Red Army Cut in Two
Marshal Timoshenko's original southern army has in effect been cut in two while escaping entrapment, and the dire peril of the altered strategic situation has been duly recognized by the Churchill-Stalin conference and by the subsequent steps taken to bolster the Middle East.

This is only the seamy side of the picture. Actually it is definitely premature to count Stalingrad lost. The Germans themselves speak of the prospects in guarded language, venturing only a statement credited to a government spokesman that "the great and decisive battle for Stalingrad has now begun."

Assuming that the Russians will now be obliged to fall back after having checked the foe at the Don elbow, the whole nature of the struggle for the Caucasus suggests that they are prepared to make a continuing, back-to-the-wall fight for Joseph Stalin's namesake city, defense of the Soviet capital. Too much is at stake to permit any more strategic withdrawals.

Russians Still Have Chance
Exposed though Stalingrad is, with its back to the Volga and only rolling open country in front, the Russians appear to have a better chance of holding it than of retaining the Grozny oil fields and other speedy Boston (Douglas) bombers have been the answer to some day-light bombing problems, but their restricted range made it impossible for them to strike deep into enemy territory.

Fortresses Best Bombers
In the Flying Fortresses the Allies have a weapon which can operate in the stratosphere, reach deep into Germany itself, strike accurately at specific targets and drive off attacking planes.

The latest convoy to arrive in England, the largest yet to cross the Atlantic in this war, brought a large proportion of airmen and air ground crews which will greatly increase the striking power of United States air forces in the European theater.

boat, and we knew they were our friends."

The natives fed the men, taught them to dig crabs in the surf and battered bananas and chickens for seamen's wares. Two matches were worn four bananas and one life preserver brought four chickens. The Africans liked United States coins, but had to be persuaded to take dollar bills.

With the natives' help, the survivors traveled on foot and by boat to a town, from which they returned to the United States by ship and plane.

Bahr Convicted

jury foreman told newspapermen later that Bahr's failure to disclose his intended mission to this country as soon as he arrived was the deciding factor in the verdict.

She said the standing ten to two for conviction. There was no recommendation for mercy.

The verdict brought tears to the eyes of the defendant's 25-year-old wife, Mrs. Ruth Bahr.

Later she visited Bahr in the court house detention room. She left shortly afterward for her home in Buffalo, Mrs. Bahr is the mother of a three-year-old son whom her husband has never seen.

Bahr, who came to this country at the age of 13, returned to his native Germany in 1938 as an exchange student in engineering and was arrested by the Federal Bureau of Investigation early last month after several days of questioning aboard the diplomatic exchange vessel Drottningholm at Jersey City.

threatened parts of the North Caucasus. At the Don the Red army has shown itself to be both strong and stubborn. There have been weeks in which to strengthen fortifications. Beyond the Volga is an unbroken, paralleling railway artery for arms and reinforcements.

Possibly of greater importance, there is some evidence that the Nazi war machine is losing much of its momentum. The original rate of progress eastward from Rostov would have carried the Germans all the way to the Volga early this month.

Von Bock's armies have pushed eastward in two months more than 300 miles, an advance nearly as great as last year's drive through the Ukraine which recoiled at Rostov in late November. Now all the military difficulties of distance which played a major role in checking the invaders previously seem to be making themselves felt. Nazi progress has been notably slower in the last week or so. Beginning next month the fall rains of the steppes are due, with their promise of slowing up progress still further.

May Bypass City

Should Stalingrad's capture prove too difficult, von Bock retains the alternative of bypassing the metropolis and striking southward down the Volga toward its mouth at Astrakham on the Caspian Sea. The seizure of Astrakham is demanded for the purpose of overrunning the direct southern route for Russian supplies from Iran.

Astrakham, however, is another 250 miles or so farther on and Hitler can not count on time as an ally.

German Tanks

all of Russia, for conquest of the Volga river city would effectively cut the Soviet army communications with the Caucasus.

A vicious battle of movement swirled over this level battlefield. The lines of attacker and defender were extremely fluid; there will be many Russians on the west bank of the Don, within the German bend, and they were counter-attacking with bayonets in an attempt to pinch off the armored formations which had been ferried across the river.

Nazis Drive New Wedge

Below Stalingrad, in the wheatlands northeast of Kotelinkovski, German tanks for the second successive day pounded a wedge in the Russian lines.

To combat this southern arm of the German pincers on the gate city of the Volga, Russian tanks now had come into action.

One of these Soviet tank groups delivered a flanking blow which the mid-day communiqué said, destroyed seven German tanks and killed more than 200 Germans. In another battle for a populated area, Red army infantrymen routed a Rumanian battalion.

The fighting below Stalingrad appears to have approached about as close to the city as has the conflict on the northwest.

(In Berlin, a German foreign office spokesman said "the great and decisive battle for Stalingrad has begun." The German high command said that German mobile troops and infantry divisions, after forcing the Don northwest of Stalingrad, had broken through strong Russian defenses east of the river. Elsewhere on the Don front Russian counter-attacks were reported "frustrated" by Italian troops.)

Russians Fall Back

The situation in the Caucasus likewise had deteriorated, especially in the area southeast of Pyatigorsk, 140 miles from the Grozny oil fields. There, in one sector, Russian troops again fell back, the mid-day communiqué said. In the West Caucasus, southeast of Krasnodar, the Russian troops fighting in the mountain passes which lead to the Black Sea naval station of Novorossiisk, were said to be fighting "defensive battles against enemy tanks and infantry."

In the swiftly developing battle for Stalingrad, which by virtue of its position controls the Volga-Caspian water route for Russia's major oil supplies, the Nazi tank groups which were ferried across the Don northeast of Kletskaia constituted the greatest menace.

In this area the Don is only about 500 yards wide, with shallow water running slowly, and it would constitute only a minor barrier to German reinforcements if the Red army defenses on the east bank are broken.

complicated home by W. Averell Harriman, personal representative of President Roosevelt, who attended the Moscow conferences. His four-day visit to Moscow was announced Aug. 17 after his visit to Egypt, during which he placed Gen. Sir Harold Alexander in command of the eighth army, relieving Gen. Claude J. E. Auchinleck.

An American Liberian plane, flown by a U. S. pilot, William Van Derout of the United States Ferry command, took the Prime Minister to Moscow and presumably brought him back.

Churchill was wearing the uniform of an air commodore and was accompanied by General Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the imperial staff; Sir Alexander Cadogan and Sir Charles Wilson.

The subjects of the Moscow conferences, attended also by the British commander in India, Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, were not announced, but complete agreement and cordiality existed, a joint British-Russian announcement said.

This Spy Plot Quickly Solved

Farmer Boy in Love Escapes Prosecution by the FBI

ST. CHARLES, Ill., Aug. 24 (AP)—When Cort Bohle flew over St. Charles and saw the big letters in the field, he thought of spies.

He called Sheriff Marcus Damsch, who called the FBI, and then every one flew over for a look. "What they saw, were the initials 'D R', a plus sign and then the initials 'C B'."

On the farm of Joseph Bagg, in a hayfield, were the letters, cut fifty feet high, six feet wide, and covering almost an acre.

Bagg said he didn't know anything about it, but that they'd better ask his son, Charley, 17.

"Sure I cut 'em," Charley said. "Cut 'em with the hay mower."

The 'CB' stands for me and O-gosh well, the 'D R' stands for my girl, Dorothy Russell.

Charley added that Dorothy was 17, too, had blue eyes and was very pretty.

On the way back to town the sheriff remarked that it was like he always said: "Never let a boy in love go out alone with a hay mower."

ARMY AIR FORCES WANT MECHANICS AND RADIOMEN

Experienced mechanics and radiomen who want to serve in the United States Army Air Forces will be put to work on planes and equipment immediately upon enlistment, Staff Sgt. Clarence Biehn, local recruiter, said yesterday.

"The Air Forces need, right now, all the men they can get who are experienced in the use of hand tools—who can go to work maintaining and repairing airplanes, engines, instruments, guns and equipment," Sgt. Biehn explained.

Some of them will be trained for air crews, thus earning an added fifty per cent of their base pay for flying duty, Sgt. Biehn added.

Men who have been mechanics of any kind should be able to qualify, Sgt. Biehn pointed out, but of course the army does not expect a man who has been an electric refrigerator serviceman to go right to work on an airplane engine and be able to fix it, he added.

All men will be given the necessary training right on the job under expert supervision. The only requirement for men who enlist for the air forces is that they must be between 18 and 44 years of age and pass a simple test to determine their ability to do the required work and to pass the physical examination for field service.

For further information see Staff Sgt. Clarence Biehn, recruiter, third floor, post office building.

away, and which was subsequently the target of the war's heaviest Commando raid.

The protest was interpreted as raising the entire question of the government's attitude toward Allied operations in occupied France. By it, the pro-Axis Laval regime was said to have taken the attitude that all installations in occupied France not actually of a German military nature were under the protection of the Vichy government.

The text of the protest was not available.

The information ministry simultaneously published a letter from a Rouen organization which said "fifteen soldiers found their death" in the bombing. Since French soldiers are not stationed in occupied France, the implication was that there appeared a conflict with the thesis of the protest.

The letter referred to "aggression of American aviators against defenseless citizens" and declared no military objectives were hit.

"After ravaging our colonies—an easy victory to compensate for constant defeats—the Anglo-Saxons seem to want to deal a hard blow against the morale of the Norman population," the letter concluded.

The reference to colonies apparently was directed to the recent British invasion of Madagascar, an action specifically approved by the United States.

The Rouen raid, led personally by the United States bombing chief, Gen. Ira C. Eaker, was said to have killed forty-eight French civilians, wounded one hundred one and destroyed forty-six houses.

Pennsylvania Police Recover Automobile Stolen from Yard Here

Pennsylvania police yesterday recovered in Uniontown the Chevrolet sedan stolen Friday from Mrs. Bernice L. Simmons, 541 North Centre street. The car was taken from Mrs. Simmons's back yard; the theft was reported to police at 6:15 a. m. Friday.

Officer Frank A. Shober Sunday recovered the automobile of William Harold Leonhart, Walbrook, that was stolen last week. Shober found the car along Christie road, east of Cumberland.

Driver Forfeits Bond on Charge of Careless Driving

Fred M. Hershberger, of Ridgeley, W. Va., forfeited bond of $5 in police court yesterday on a charge of careless driving. Officer Frank A. Shober preferred the charge.

Arrested by Sgt. John Doud on a charge of failing to stop at a boulevard intersection, Juley Frank Nazelrod, of Route 5, received a suspended fine in trial magistrates' court upon payment of the court costs.

Harry L. Youngblood, this city, received a suspended sentence in police court on a charge of disorderly conduct. Harold Ralston, held on the same charge, was released for treatment of a leg injury suffered when he ran against an automobile Saturday night. Officers Arthur Kennell and F. M. Powell made the arrests.

so effective the Germans were unable to penetrate it during the bombardment. At one time forty German fighters tried unsuccessfully to intercept the bombers.

A communiqué issued by the United States army command in Great Britain and the British air ministry said the bombing was carried out at a high level, as were previous U. S. raids. There was no indication as to the results, but in the American raids on Rouen, Abbeville and Amiens such precision bombing had been extremely effective.

Fourth Attack by Fortresses

The Flying Fortresses, manned by United States crews, went into action over German-occupied Europe for the first time last Monday. Two days later bombed a German air base at Abbeville while the Commandos were raiding Dieppe and Thursday they bombed Amiens.

When Dollars Are Not Wealth

AS readers of this newspaper are aware, it has on various occasions pointed out what seemed to it to be strange inconsistencies on the part of the Washington tax planners regarding the great wealth it conceives to be pouring upon the people as the result of war production.

Note has been made that the war plant payments has not gone to the people generally, that while distributed among many in the lower tax income brackets it has not been received by millions of them in that class, notably the white collar workers; that it would be unjust to penalize all for the sake of reaching some, and that what has been so frequently branded as newly created wealth in the increased war production wages does not represent wealth after all.

The last-named item comes in for further consideration by the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer, which has also commented previously in like vein, being prompted by a department of Commerce bulletin noting the existence of a higher national income. The figures given are impressive but the Intelligencer says they are apt to be misleading.

"It has been stated over and over again," says the Wheeling newspaper, "although not sufficiently impressed upon the public mind, that dollars themselves are not wealth. It is what they represent that counts. In this case, they represent chiefly guns and tanks and ships and bombs and shells and fighting planes and the cost of servicing vast numbers of men under arms. This is not wealth by any stretch of the imagination. It is necessary, but it is not income."

"True national income is made up of the things and services that add to the sum total of living—the things men eat and wear and use and enjoy. We have fewer of these things rather than more today. Thus our real income is shrinking rather than expanding and will continue to do so at a perhaps accelerated rate so long as the war lasts."

"It is necessary, of course, that we surrender some of the things we normally use for the sake of the war effort. Guns are more important than radios at the moment. But because we are bending every resource to the production of guns, we are deluding ourselves when we look upon the attendant activity and exchange of money necessary to keep it going as evidence of prosperity and expanding income."

It is regrettable that the distinction so clearly defined by the Intelligencer is not more generally appreciated and particularly in Washington legislative circles.

Another Frivolity Succumbs to War

ONE of the peculiar forms of freedom of speech, unforeseen by the Founding Fathers of the country when they framed the Bill of Rights, is about to be extinguished because of the war. The casualty is the singing telegram, or rather the right of messenger boys to sing birthday greetings at unsuspecting business men in their offices and plants and even in the sanctity of their homes.

Even today it is not the government which is interfering with the practice, save indirectly. The telegraph firms have announced termination of the custom. After September 18 the service will pass out along with several other special services now offered by the two concerns. It is held that maintenance of these services frequently delayed a growing volume of war and industrial messages.

Doubtless the senders of the singing telegrams will miss them much more than the recipients. While the senders of the singing telegrams may feel that a cherished right has been obliterated, many who have received them and regarded them as a piece of damned foolishness will most likely be glad that the service is being terminated.

The Windshield Sticker Menace

STATE AUTOMOBILE LICENSES for 1943 will consist either of small metal strips attached to the 1942 plates or windshield stickers, according to information from the Federation of Tax Administrators.

A survey conducted by the Ohio State Department of Highways shows, according to the federation, that at least thirteen states have decided to use a small metal rear tag, such as was adopted in Maryland and some other states in order to conserve steel, while some seven states will issue decalcomania windshield stickers.

Doubtless Maryland will continue the use of the small metal strips. At any rate, it is to be hoped these can be utilized instead of the windshield stickers. This is because the windshield sticker pasting has become both a nuisance and a driving hazard. Already there are certificates of inspection, gasoline rationing signs, federal stamps, and even other stickers on the windshields, and there are the political candidates to consider.

The windshield is on the car for the purpose of seeing the road ahead. When it is cluttered up and obstructed by a lot of pasters, vision is restricted, hence the driving menace.

If this senseless craze for windshield stickers continues it may become necessary to provide a spare piece of glass somewhere on the car—preferably below the windows—but one cannot figure much on that, as there might be a glass shortage.

An Unfortunate Slip In Journalistic Ethics

AN INTERESTING AFTERMATH of the court suit at Chicago over Stanley Johnston's dispatch about the size and composition of the Japanese fleet in the Midway battle, is a discussion over its indicated source.

While the charge was not sustained, and it is difficult to understand how information about the Japanese fleet could have told the enemy anything he did not already know, the explanation about the source of the article was not at all satisfactory.

The managing editor of the Chicago Tribune told Admiral Willson that "it is common practice all over the United States to ascribe to Washington a story of federal affairs that cannot be pinned on any definite place or spot." The source was ascribed to unnamed navy officials.

That, in the opinion of this newspaper, was an egregious error and reaction thereon bears it out as such. Such a practice is not in accordance with good journalistic ethics, and it is good to see that it is being generally repudiated by the press.

Otherwise, the Johnston dispatch appeared on the whole to have been a good thing in that it tended to show that the United States won a great victory at Midway, the effect of which could only have been to raise the public morale. Johnston did a wonderful piece of reporting about the Midway battle altogether and he deserves hearty praise for his efforts.

A Bit of Relief Comes In the Tire Situation

GOOD NEWS about the tire situation has come to hand in the announcement by a leading rubber manufacturing company of the development of a "tire sandal," which will be ready for distribution within a month.

Somewhat resembling a closely stitched bath mat or rug, the sandal is made of cotton pile fabric and treated with an asphalt emulsion. It is intended to be locked over the outside surface of the worn tire with smooth part points tucked between rim and casing.

Company officials report tests made since March have indicated that the sandal will give from 2,500 to 3,000 miles of additional life to tires used at a top speed of thirty miles an hour.

Thus we again see that American science and ingenuity can be depended upon to fill shortage gaps. Yet, this example should not lull the average car driver into false hopes respecting the gradual disappearance of their rubber tires. Conservation will still be in order even when they are able to get these sandals for the reason that the sandals will provide only a possible temporary relief and will not be of service if the casings are worn out.

What's that western professor, who said men are much smarter than women, trying to start? Isn't there enough fighting going on as things are?

Every day we learn something new and startling. Example: In his youth as a rising young lawyer, Mahatma Gandhi was one of the best-dressed men in London.

Madame Mother

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Maria Laetitia Ramolino was a poor Italian girl. She married and had sons and daughters. One of these sons became astonishingly large.

A genius, a conqueror, Napoleon the GREAT. When he became emperor, setting the crown on his own head, Maria became Madame Mother, and shared his power and magnificence. . . . But though she shared it, she did not live it, and frequently she'd say to herself, doubtfully and prayerfully, "Si cela dure! If it only lasts! Si cela dure!"

It did NOT last; she outlived her son by fifteen years and many a time I've wondered what were the thoughts of Madame Mother in those last years.

People say, "It's too good to be true!" He's too good to be true. She's too good to be true. This happiness, this fortune, is too good to be true. . . . That is superstition, a part of all people. Nothing is too good to be true, but men and women in their happiness are afraid, and the fear makes the happiness doubly precious.

Once, during the last war I remember we sat around a table, eating our evening meal. We were sick of the war and didn't wish to talk about it. . . . Someone said: "Let's get as far away from the war as we can." So we talked about food and its effect on people. We wondered if tigers were tigers because they ate raw meat or if they ate raw meat because they were tigers. Then we discussed inherited and acquired characteristics in animals and in people. We talked about habits, about birth marks, about chins. We mentioned the big Bourbon noses and the receding Hohenzollern chins. We mentioned the Kaiser—and in less than ten minutes we were back in the middle of the war. . . . There's nothing in this business of deliberately trying to get away from the line that interests you most.

In that war I learned how rare cowardice really is. . . . I knew thousands of soldiers but only one coward. Physical bravery is so common a thing that it can be assumed as a natural thing. . . . Recruits were afraid at first before danger became a commonplace to them; but afterwards—though they became quite clever at flattening themselves when shells went by—they became used to the war and did their duty even when they were scared. That's what effective bravery really is.

Manpower Faces A Critical Stage, Lawrence Says

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Efforts are being made by officialdom to hide the breakdown on the production front that resulted from the failure to allocate raw materials properly in the first place so as to avoid plant shutdowns. And in a few months similar efforts will be made to hide the breakdown that is coming inside business and industry as result of incompetent handling of the Selective Service System.

Without overall planning and in the same helter-skelter way that raw materials have been misallocated so also there is about to begin the biggest maldistribution of all—manpower.

Millions of Americans, married men with or without children, many of them 40 to 45 years old, key employees needed to make or supervise the making of guns and tanks and planes and ships are about to be taken out of the industrial organization, management and workers, and assigned to jobs in the army that would willingly have been taken by citizens who have already volunteered their services but are not given a chance to serve in the capacities for which they are best qualified.

Evidence of the lack of planning is to be found in the offhand manner in which national policies affecting the operation of the draft law are being issued. Speeches and statements from Selective Service headquarters say one thing and local draft boards often say another.

Serious Drain in Prospect
Employers who are working night and day trying to cope with almost insuperable problems of personnel in stretching management energies to the utmost will find at the end of the next six months that their organizations have been seriously drained of competent people and that there is no redress.

When the fiasco has happened—and unless there is a change soon it will surely happen just as the War Production Board muddle was predicted and now has materialized—efforts will be made to camouflage the reasons for the mess. It will be conveniently blamed on "military necessity." The real reason will be administrative stupidity.

Thus, many employers are due for their biggest disillusionment when they try to get occupational deferments for their key men. Many of these employers accepted in good faith the formal statements widely circulated that they would have a chance to argue the case of key employees before local draft boards. But it develops now that nowhere in the regulations are there any rights granted to an employer.

No Right to Audience
He, of course, can file written data at certain times in the procedure but he has no right at any time to a personal audience with the local draft board. These boards may give him a hearing but the regulations are so phrased as to make it discretionary rather than mandatory. Some of the draft boards, giving one excuse or another, are rejecting requests for deferment and immediately issuing orders for induction so that there is no opportunity for anyone to go before them and explain the value of key employees. State directors are already refusing to intervene.

There is another disillusionment coming when employers try to get employees back who, through improper procedure, have erroneously been inducted into the army. Unless the draftee himself signs the request for release, it cannot be given any consideration. The draftee may not wish to be placed in the position of asking to be released from military service and, if he takes that attitude, there is nothing in the regulations which permits the employer to take the initiative or to file any papers whatsoever.

Employer Helpless
Once an order for induction is issued—and these things come suddenly and often without warning—the employer is absolutely helpless.

The two national winners were chosen from state winners in all the leading dairy states in the country. The other champion was from the far-away state of Washington.

The dairy herd of fifty registered Holstein-Friesians, owned by John M. Dennis of Ridewood, completed a year of testing with an average production of 467 pounds of butterfat and 12,933 pounds of milk for each cow. They were milked three times a day. This butterfat average is more than two and a half times as much as that of the country's average dairy cow, according to statistics of the United States Department of Agriculture.

SOME FOLKS DON'T KNOW WHEN IT'S THEIR OWN HOME THAT'S BURNING

Second Yardstick of War Labor Board Is Not Workable, Mark Sullivan Says

By MARK SULLIVAN

Last week a grave injustice was perpetrated by the Selective Service headquarters when it violated the spirit of its own regulations, if not the letter. It ordered all 1-B registrants reclassified into 1-A and cautioned local boards that a registrant's occupational classification should be reviewed but it made no provision for men in process of induction who were denied any such review even though their induction order stipulated that they were to report for duty subsequent to August 20—the day the new policy was officially declared effective.

State Selective Service directors refused to postpone inductions in these cases so as to give employers a chance to be heard.

Instances of indiscriminate discrimination are numerous. The trouble is in Washington where there is a persistent refusal to issue simple instructions ordering local draft boards to apply the regulations uniformly. Donald Nelson is under fire now, but in a few weeks it will be Gen. Hershey's efficiency that will be questioned in the headlines.

Not a Helpful Way
The draft system's lack of uniform administration will be criticized for disrupting the production machine by allowing key-employees and managers to be drafted without the employer being given adequate opportunity either to replace or to show why he cannot replace the employees in question.

This is not the way to help American industry meet the production goals set by President Roosevelt. It's one way to help lose the war.

Reproduction rights reserved

One of President Roosevelt's unofficial aides, Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, of New York, who occasionally serves the president as a kind of trouble-tinker—is moving about among the administration boards and agencies whose functions affect inflation. As he assembles information, he passes it on to the president, with possibly some suggestions and ideas. Out of it all, something is expected to emerge in maybe a week or so.

In one agency, the War Labor Board, a definite step has been taken. For anything that is definite and actual, we ought to be grateful. But when this step is examined, with the complexities attending it, it is difficult—this is said in the most serious and literal sense—it is difficult to be sure whether it is a step forward or a step backward. It is genuinely meant, of course, as a step forward. The step is this:

The War Labor Board picks out a fixed date in the past, as a kind of normal, a par. The date they pick is January 1, 1941. They assume that wages, as of that date, were normal—that the relation between wages and prices and cost of living, as of that time, was about right. Choice of January 1, 1941 as a base, is supported by some good reasons.

So, the War Labor Board takes January 1, 1941, as a starting point. They say that during sixteen months following that date—that is, up to May of this year—there was a fifteen percent increase in cost of living. This is incontestable. It is supported by statistics and by the common experience of all of us.

This fifteen percent rise that has already taken place, the board accepts as fait accompli—something done and not practicable to undo. They say the great job is to prevent future increases. Considering the difficulty of that, it is hardly worth while to fuss with water over the dam.

Yardstick Chosen
Next, the board says that because there has been a fifteen percent increase in cost of living, there ought to be a corresponding increase of fifteen percent in wages. If a wage was, say $1 an hour January 1 last, it ought now to be $1.15 an hour. This is the board's measuring rod—their "thus far and no farther."

It is a rough and simple standard, easy to understand and easy to apply. When a demand for a wage increase comes before the board, the board gets out its measuring rod. If present wages in a given case are as much as fifteen percent more than they were on January first last year, then the board refuses any further raise. If there has been some increase, but not as much as fifteen percent, the board decrees as much increase as will make fifteen percent in all.

Thus far, the board's position is a real step toward stabilizing wages. If the board did this and stopped with this, we might have some progress toward preventing further rise in cost of living, further inflation.

Impossible Task
But the board does not stop with saying that wages must be "stabilized." They say further that wages must also be "equalized." So they get involved in the intricate and everlastingly disputatious job of saying whether one man's wages ought to be as much as another's—how much less one man is worth than another is worth. And of all the subjects of human dispute, this is the one about which it is least possible to get agreement. Hardly is there a Jones alive who does not think his wages are too low, compared with Brown's. And when the Joneses and Browns are both played upon by union organizers, the Labor board has an impossible task.

The board tries to equalize wages—or to work gradually toward equalization—in half a dozen different ways. They try to equalize between men doing one kind of work in a plant, and men doing another kind of work in the same plant; between men working at a given job in one plant and men working at the same kind of job in another plant; between men and women doing approximately the same kind of work; between plants in the North and plants in the South; between hourly rates of wages received by one group, and total wages per week received by another group.

Socialistic Trend
The board's attempt to equalize wages is so complex as to be impossible in any practicable sense. Further, it involves the board between two things that are mutually exclusive. To stabilize wages is to adjust America's existing economic system to the exigencies of war. But to equalize wages by government action would be to move in the general direction of a different economic system, so-called economic equality, economic leveling, which is a characteristic of theoretical Socialism. Uniformity of income was attempted in the early experiment in Russia, but is not now practiced.

In addition to the War Labor Board, some six other administration agencies have functions which affect the causes of inflation. Only by bringing all into common action, can inflation be prevented. To accomplish that, the device now talked about in Washington is another board, a big board to be above the other boards.

Dieppe Raid Not A Surprise but Truly Remarkable

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Lost point in most current discussions of the surprise Commando raid on Dieppe is that it was not a surprise.

That kind of an attack relies for full success, not on overwhelming numbers or superior ferocity, but on catching the defense unaware.

The advantages of carefully placed defending guns, protected by concrete, steel and sandbags, generally can be offset only if the defenders are off guard.

In the light of the fact that the expedition was unfortunately disclosed offshore by four Nazi anti-aircraft gunships (flakships), and the Nazis at Dieppe were fully forewarned and in their places ready to receive a storm, the feat of arms becomes doubly remarkable for accomplishing as much as it did.

But that same light casts speculative beams on how much more would have been accomplished with less loss, had our ships not stumbled on the Nazis unexpectedly in the darkness.

Mostly Canadian
Also this was almost entirely a Canadian show, our participation was restricted to experimental cooperation.

Incidentally, the London reports have conveyed an impression that our participants are returning to the United States to act as instructors, suggesting that their experience may not be used again immediately in Commando action.

Only a portion are returning for teaching. The others will lead more raids in which United States forces will participate in greater numbers—and with greater secrecy assured.

No more stray flakships will be allowed to discover our purposes and spread an alarm.

Dewey in Ascendancy
It was truly a daring Commando-like feat of politics when General Jim Farley took control of the president's party in the largest state of the union—although it was not a surprise and may not have the wide repercussions which are commonly forecast.

Overlooked and controlling point of Farley's raid was that everyone expects the Republican Dewey to win the state in November.

Dewey has long seemed to be an odds-on favorite to most politicians here, no matter whether the Democrats split, whether Mead or Bennett was nominated, no matter the American Labor party.

The popular Lehman beat him by only 64,396 votes in 1938 (out of nearly 4,700,000 cast). The odds would even have been against Lehman if he had run again.

Thus Mr. Farley is apt to wind up with a Democratic party control in the state, weakened by lack of any kind of pap to sustain it. He cannot get any federal of New York city patronage, and if Bennett loses he will be without state patronage.

Faced with such difficulties, it would be difficult for him to build up any kind of a formidable machine, even though he is the most astute politico in the business.

Power Limited
Mr. Farley fought for what he thought was right and got nearly even or what was done to him in Washington, but you can see, if you sift the facts further, that his power for the 1944 presidential contest is more uncertain than popular comment suggests.

If Mr. Roosevelt wants a fourth term and the war is won or being successfully prosecuted in 1944, any bookmaker would favor White House chances of getting the New York delegation to the next convention. However, Farley could probably swing the delegation against any other person, Mr. Roosevelt would try to name as his successor.

No one can see so far ahead these days with any clarity but as Democratic matters stand today, anyone except Mr. Roosevelt would have a very hard time getting that Democratic nomination nationally.

Republicans Hard Put
How broke are the Republicans can best be gauged by considering that they chose a Democrat (a capable anti-Roosevelt Democrat, Sam Pettigill, of Indiana) to head their money-raising finance committee.

How pressed and unorganized they are can best be judged by two other observations:

The rich CIO bought the well placed building which Republicans rented for headquarters, less than half a block from the White House, and chased them out, farther up Connecticut Avenue.

Republican senators and representatives are almost unanimous in the opinion that the titular head of the party, Mr. Wilkie, could get the Democratic party nomination for president today much easier than he could get the Republican nomination. His republican organizational support around here has almost entirely fallen away. Only the Dewey chances are ascending on the nether political horizon.

Parents Should Learn To Speak In a Soft Voice

Many Fathers and Mothers Talk Too Loud, Dr. Garry Myers Says

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.
Why do high-pitched squeaky voices irritate us? Why does such a voice annoy children?
Many a parent talks very much louder, and with a very much higher pitched voice, to children and to those about her, than is necessary. Her voice is highest, loudest when she is most tired and irritable. It is then that children grow irritated, too, and talk louder.

If the average parent could hear his own voice when he is talking to his children, he would be very much surprised. If he had to listen to it fifteen minutes he would want to run away. No one wants to be a nuisance. If he talks in such a way as to be an irritant to others it is not his wish to do so. Human nature acts that way.

Irritating Voices
At the moment when we get excited or things don't go right, or we get a little angry, up go our voices, we then to those who have to listen to us. The average mother has so much to do and there are so many little annoyances which come her way that frequently she may be led to lose control of herself temporarily and raise her voice.

The thousand problems which she must meet and the many duties that are thrust upon her often keep her at a tension. Consequently, these little incidents of annoyance may come so frequently that her voice may be highly keyed, not only when she is irritated and angry, but at all other times as well.

In consequence, she may talk at high pitch and loudly nearly all the time unless she sets out to correct this difficulty. Sometimes she is not aware of this malady. Her children also may not notice it; but they are irritated by it just the same.

Cultivate a Soft Voice
They associate a high-pitched, loud voice with annoyance, with anger. Consequently when anyone, whether or not in a good humor, speaks in a high-keyed voice he stirs up unhappy feelings in us.

It suggests anger or excitement to almost every human being. On the other hand, when our mothers talked to us and cuddled us as babies, and when we saw them fondling and cuddling other children, at those moments when they were dearest to us and talked like comrades with us about our problems, and showed us their sympathy, they spoke softly and calmly.

It is inevitable that we associate a sweet, soft, mellow voice with happiness. We respond with pleasant feelings to such a voice.

Mark's Wife

by MARIE BLIZARD
WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

SYNOPSIS
BARBARA WISTER, former actress, finds herself a widow at 27, when her husband dies. Her only friend in the small town of South Wintridge, where she lives, is DR. TONY BRADSHAW, a young physician. Owner of the town's only big business is TOM KILCRAN, whose daughter, PAMELA, and wife, CLAUDE, are haughty, cold and selfish.

YESTERDAY Pamela implies to Tony that Tom Kilcran has been considering the construction of such a hospital as Tony had asked.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN
"DAD CAN always be made to see the light. In fact, I'm rather good at showing it to him." Pamela got up and put her arms into her beaver coat. When she had buttoned it under her chin, she held out her hand. "Nice to see you again, Doctor. When you want to get at Father again, let's talk it over."

Tony didn't want her to go then. He took the books she was about to pick up. "Look here," he said. "Maybe . . . I mean . . ." and then, to Barbara's complete surprise, he cast an apologetic look in her direction. "Maybe we could talk it over. If you knew how badly we need . . ."

"A week from today," Pamela said, pulling on her angora mittens. "We'll do it then. We have dinner at eight. Come at seven-fifteen and we'll have cocktails—alone."

"Dinner? . . . Oh, yes, sure. Thanks. Do I . . . er . . ."

"No. Just black tie. It'll be a family party. We'll play some bridge."

He picked up his hat and her books. "Can I take these out to your car?"

She nodded, waved carelessly to Barbara and went to the door. Tony held it open and said, "Barbara, I want to talk to you. I'll be right back."

Pamela was close to him. She lifted her head. "Would you mind giving me a lift? I left my car in the garage for repairs."

Tony looked back at Barbara. "I thought . . . Barbara, I'll come back for you."

Barbara shook her head. "Miss Calder's just arrived with my car. She'll drive me home. Go along, Tony."

Once more Pamela looked up through her long lashes. "That would be sweet. Sure you don't mind?"

Whatever he said, Barbara didn't hear because Ruth Calder came in at that moment, spoke to Tony and closed the door after them. Then she fell into the chair Pamela had vacated. "Well—?" she asked. "All right," Barbara said warily. "Not more people than I could handle, but it's started. How do you think the place looks?"

"Cory enough to call home, but I'd leave Buckingham palace for a good strong cup of tea."

"Tea!" Barbara wrote the word in a notebook and slipped it into her pocket. "I'll bring down my tea set tomorrow and serve tea, toast and Mrs. Alwyn's ginger marmalade on cold afternoons."

"And that's where your little profits will go?"

Barbara shook her head wisely. "I read a book on merchandising which says that you have to create an atmosphere and atmospheres create the desire to . . . well, anyway, it will bring people in and then they'll just naturally want to buy. I'll talk books to them for presents, and owning their own libraries and everything will be wonderful." She took the notebook out and wrote two more words. "I must get little lolly-pops for the children and peppermints for the old people."

"You might try bank night and sets of dishes."

"I might. In the meantime, I must have Mrs. Alwyn make me some more of that marmalade. She's the only one who has the recipe."

"You'd better hoard your profits."

"It won't cost much. The poor old thing is 80 and she hasn't a penny in her pocket. Bread on the water, you know. . . . Come along, Ruth. I'll let you carry the day's receipts." She took a lonely dime out of the cash box.

"You'll never send the boy to college on this, my dear."

"I shall be rich by that time," Barbara told her gaily, and went to get her coat.

"You ought to be married and have more children by that time," Barbara came back with her coat on and snatched off the light over her desk. "Speaking of such matters, don't you think Tony and the Kilcran girl make an attractive couple?"

The nurse gave her a short glance. "Not particularly. She's pretty enough, but hardly the right sort of girl for a bright, ambitious boy like Tony. He's a good doctor, a good friend and—" she paused and said meaningfully—"someday he'll make a good husband."

The way she said it caused Barbara to look at her sharply. She was going to answer the implication but, deciding that it was patently ridiculous, she said, "I'm very much interested in young Pamela. She's an unhappy child and I should like to know why."

"Child!" Ruth Calder snorted indignantly. "She's a woman who knows what she wants. And she could be a formidable rival."

Barbara laughed and hastily put out the last lamp so that the older woman couldn't see the warm flush she felt rise foolishly to her cheeks.

How utterly absurd, she thought, that Ruth should try to make out a romantic situation between Tony and me. And how indecent, she added to the thought sternly, remembering that she was but a month widowed.

Little things like that changed simple things into complications. She resolved to put it completely out of mind. If she didn't, she might find herself looking at Tony through different eyes. Besides, he now was like a kind brother to her and she meant to cherish that relationship and never jeopardize it by putting a false light upon it.

She climbed back of the wheel of her car and put her foot on the starter.

"Tony—" Ruth said.

"I suspect you've a crush on him," Barbara said hastily.

"No doubt about it. Thirty years ago—that was before you were born and I'd just graduated from nursing school—I used to work on cases with his father. That was when I first saw him. I used to think it was love at first sight, for all that I was 22 and he was only 10 months."

"You should have got married, Ruth. You'd have made a wonderful mother."

"And I might give you the same advice. You're young, my dear, and . . ."

"I don't think I ever want to get married again," Barbara said in a low voice, as much to herself as to her companion. "I've Sonny and work now. Everything I want."

"Careful," Ruth Calder warned. "I've seen too much of the inevitability of life and death to have superstitions, but little chills run down my back when I hear youth tempt fate with such remarks."

"I'm making my own destiny now," Barbara replied bravely, but she crossed her fingers as she swung the wheel around and turned the car into her drive.

When he sat down, the general was left standing in the aisle. Red-faced, the men quickly squeezed together and made room for him.

STORING POTATOES

Potatoes should be cultivated frequently to keep the soil in a loose, friable condition. This results in a continuous and steady growth so important for good results. Obviously, the heavier the top growth and the healthier the leaves the more starch is formed and the larger the potatoes will be. Therefore, a spraying program should be maintained to keep insects and blight under control.

ALLOW POTATOES TO DRY OFF AFTER DIGGING

As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, dig potatoes carefully when the soil is dry and allow them to dry for a few hours in the sun so any surface moisture can evaporate.

Potatoes keep best in a cool, moist cellar or pit. They must be protected from light or they will turn green and they must not be permitted to freeze.

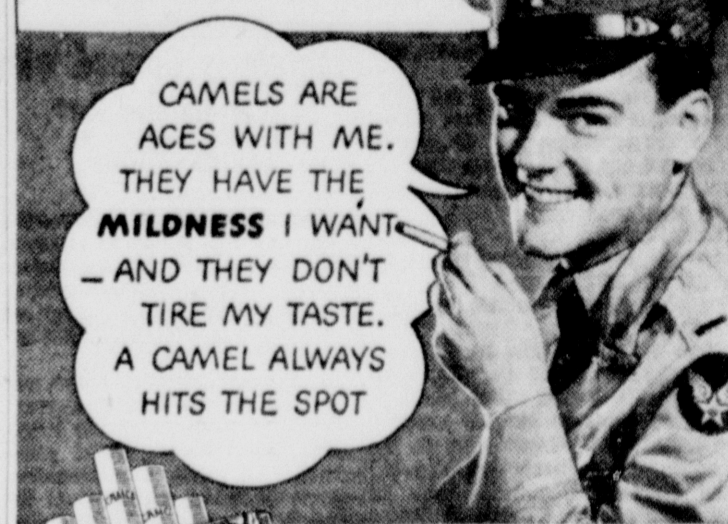

Current bushes should be cut back this month to induce new growth for next year's bearing.

When picking apples great care should be taken not to bruise them either when picking or packing as these early apples rot easily.

Early pears should be picked a week or more before they become soft. Store them in a cool, dark place to ripen.

Dangers of Football Not Confined To Players; Bystander May Suffer

By LOGAN C. CLENDENING, M. D.

In my collection of newspaper clippings of reports of injuries, deaths, blindness and amputations that resulted from football games last year, I find that not only the players, but the innocent bystander may suffer.

Five referees or officials got too near the fray for comfort last year. I quote from an Ohio newspaper for Nov. 21, 1941: "The contest was marred by a mishap that befell Referee X. In the third quarter he had a leg fractured when he was knocked down by a couple of gridders."

An old gentleman was walking with his granddaughter near a football field in a public park when the ball went out of bounds and the players came swarming over him, knocking him down, breaking an arm and injuring the little girl.

III Effects of Game
The danger to spectators may grow so that the grandstand will be moved a quarter of a mile from the playing field and the game will have to be observed with binoculars. They will make just as much sense out of it because never has there been evolved a more boring or stupider game.

I have gone to games with men who were stars as recently as 1930 and officials until 1935 and when asked what such or such a play or penalty meant, they said they did not know, but would read about it in the papers in the morning. The rule book is so stuffed with penalties that it looks like the Encyclopedia Britannica.

But, of course, football hardens men so that they can stand anything in after life. Oh, yes! About half of one per cent of any student body gets the benefit of this healthy sport. But think how fortunate they are. Listen! From a Wyoming newspaper for Oct. 16, 1941: "X, well-known athlete who has spent two and a half years recovering from a broken back due to a football accident, while leaning over to tie his shoe lace snapped his spine again."

In other words, football hardens you so that even leaning over to tie your shoe breaks your back.

Doctor Advises Soccer Football
It may be this year that we have enough inevitable trouble with death and maiming of our youth, so that high school and college associations will decide to cancel all football schedules for the season or even for the duration, which means at least five years. If so, I predict that they will never go back to it. For an autumn athletic open air contest, they could easily substitute soccer football—a good healthy game, interesting to the spectators and a thousand times safer than our ridiculous "game"—American football.

I welcome the Belleville, Illinois, Dad's Club to the ranks of those who see the dangers. They voted last year to request school authorities not to let any 19-year-old boys play football.

Questions and Answers
M. R.: Does the gallbladder empty quicker on a full or empty stomach? Do you think a person having this ailment could drink too much grapefruit juice?

Answer: The gallbladder contains bile and bile is necessary for intestinal digestion. The gallbladder does not empty bile into the intestine until there is food present. Fat is the food that causes the strongest reflex emptying of the gallbladder. As soon as the stomach begins to move food on into the intestine the gallbladder begins to empty. Therefore the answer to your question is that the gallbladder empties when the stomach is full. Grapefruit juice has no action, one way or the other, on the gallbladder.

Friend Owl Tells About "Twitterpated"

"Plenty sold!"
That is the way the 'teen and 'twenty age groups viewing Walt Disney's new feature, "Bambi," starting Thursday at the Liberty theater, described the new owl character who manages to waddle away with so many scenes in this, Disney's first picturization of a best-selling novel.

The Disney artists responsible for the owl's crochety comicalness all credit for their new feathered friend's screen success, and lay it all at the claws of a real owl who for several years made his nest in a tree outside a studio window.

During the five years it took to create the Disney version of Felix Salten's Book-of-the-Month favorite, artists assigned to the owl character were moved to the room overlooking the real owl's nest.

The live counterpart of the new Disney comedy star always arrived home from a night's whooping-it-up just as the studio was starting the day's work. If the boys got too noisy during the day, the owl rose from his nest, gave them an ill-natured hoot, ruffled his feathers, and turned his back on them.

All of the owl's moods and mannerisms were captured on paper and re-created on the screen through the magic of animation. And the Owl it is who introduces that most famous of "Bambi" scenes, the "twitterpated" sequence.

Director's Double Talk Baffles Cast

Director Gregor Ratoff experimented on what he calls "shorthand directing" during the filming of "Footlight Serenade." Twentieth Century-Fox's fast musical starring Betty Grable, Victor Mature and John Payne, and now playing at the Strand theater.

Before shooting one of the scenes, he explained to James Gleason and Phil Silvers, the featured comedians:

"Ven a take is no good, I will knock my cane vunce on the stage. Ven it is good I knock twice. If it's terrible, I knock three times—but we don't print dot! Ve print the next vunce which should be sensational!"

Miss Hunt, Carlson Score in Gay Farce

"The Affairs of Martha," which opens today at the Maryland theater is a satisfying demonstration of capable acting, skilled direction and clever material.

The story by Isobel Lennart and Lee Gold was original in plot and packed with opportunities. Jules Dassin, the director, and a first rate cast have seized upon them all. The story concerns a family in high society which is agitated by distraction by the announcement in a gossip column that a certain housemaid is writing a book. It's a revealing book, having much to say about the private lives of her employers and their associates in the so-called four hundred.

Unknown to the family, their son is married to the maid in their home and she is the author of the book. At the same time a divorce being imminent, the son is engaged to a society girl. The maid is receiving attention from two suitors and her sub-rosa husband is extremely jealous.

This is the highly complicated situation which is eventually cleared up to the satisfaction of all concerned, and to the amusement of the audience.

Marsha Hunt is a lovely maid with literary ability. Richard Carlson portrays her young husband, scion of society. Melville Cooper and Spring Byington are the worried parents and Frances Drake impersonates the fiancée. With Marjorie Main as housekeeper, Virginia Weidler has the role of the mischievous young daughter, and the young men interested in the book-writing maid are played by Barry Nelson and Allyn Joslyn.

Top Laughmakers Star In "Hit Parade of 1941"

Eight brands of comedy that will please the palates of the most discriminating scenes of humor are jelled together in a merry-go-round of fun in Republic's "Hit Parade of 1941," which is currently at the Embassy theater.

The antics of such top laughmakers as Hugh Herbert, Patsy Kelly, Mary Boland, Sterling Holloway, Phil Silvers, Donald McBride, Barnett Parker, and Borrah Minevitch race through the musical with such a variety of humor that the laughs run a mile a minute. The "woo woo" and imitable dialogue delivery of comic Hugh Herbert provides a picture full of laughs. But to them are added the gurgly Mary Boland wit, the Patsy Kelly kind that proves one funny face is worth ten lines of dialogue, and he of the crying voice, Sterling Holloway.

Hollywood has discovered its youngest and newest romantic screen team.

They are none other than 11-year-old Ann Todd and 12-year-old Douglas Croft, who appear together with Claudette Colbert in Twentieth Century-Fox's "Remember the Day," the present attraction at the Garden theater.

In the picture they are childhood sweethearts who ultimately grow up and marry. In the only other picture Douglas has made, he was Ann's sweetheart.

Persons under 21 Can Cast Ballot In Primary

New Voters Must Reach Majority by November 3 and Register

Persons reaching their twenty-first birthday on or before November 3 are eligible to vote in both the primary and general elections although they may not be twenty-one at the time the primary election is held, Edward J. Ryan, attorney to the Allegany County Board of Election Supervisors, said yesterday.

It is generally believed, Ryan explained, that only persons becoming twenty-one years of age before the primary date, September 8 this year, are eligible to vote in the primary.

While it is generally known that persons may register to vote in the November 3 election who become twenty-one on that date, it is not generally known that the law recognizes the right of the coming voter to participate in the selection of candidates in the primary.

The law specifically states however that persons who may be entitled to vote in the next general election are entitled to register on the first Tuesday prior to the primary and vote in all primary and general elections thereafter.

Section twenty-one of article thirty-three of the Maryland law provides that "On the Tuesday preceding any primary election to be held in any year in this state and which shall occur after the enactment of this law, each board of registration shall meet at the place designated by its board of supervisors of election, and shall proceed in the manner set forth in section eighteen hereof, to make a registration of all the voters in its precincts or district, as the case may be, who have not previously registered and who may be entitled to vote at the next general election and shall present themselves before such board of registration, and such person or persons so registered shall be entitled to vote at all primary and general elections hereinafter provided that nothing in this section shall apply to Baltimore City, nor affect the law now in effect governing the registration of voters therein."

Slight Decrease Noted In Water Consumption

A decrease in daily water consumption was noted during the past week over the previous week, however water use in the city still amounts to more than ninety percent of the daily capacity of the pipe line.

Water consumption for the week ending Sunday was 63,790,000 gallons or a daily average of 9,113,000 gallons. The previous week the daily average was 9,541,000 gallons. A year ago the daily average was 8,400,000 gallons. In Lake Koon water is one foot, six inches below the crest of the dam and in Lake Gordon is one foot, three inches below.

Treasury Official Praises 'Retailers For Victory' Drive

Benjamin H. Namm Says Local Merchants Have Outstanding Record

The sale of approximately $125,000 worth of war bonds and stamps by local merchants during the July "Retailers for Victory" drive is described as "one of the best records made throughout the country" in a letter received by Harold W. Smith, executive secretary of the chamber of commerce, from Benjamin H. Namm, chairman, Retail Advisory Committee, United States Treasury, War Savings staff.

Merchants here set $46,000 as their goal for July, but when final figures were released they revealed that retailers had sold approximately $125,000 worth of bonds and stamps, almost trebling the quota. The county as a whole also passed its goal of $261,000 for the month and reported total sales of $308,000. In Namm's letter to Smith he says that "Mr. Charles A. Piper (state committeeman of the war savings staff) has just informed me of the splendid results achieved during the July 'Retailers for Victory' campaign, and I wish to congratulate you and all of the local merchants who participated in having done such an outstanding job."

"There are very few cities in the country who were able to double their quota and yet I note that you almost tripled yours."

"This is one of the best records made throughout the country. It certainly seems that a few verbal bouquets are in order for your organization and the merchants who participated, and I take it for granted that we may continue to count upon their co-operation from now until victory."

Allagany county's quota for the sale of war bonds and stamps during the month of August is $221,000. Piper said last night that "sales for August are progressing nicely but renewed effort must be made to reach the quota."

42 Suggestions

Three—Install storm doors and storm sashes.

Four—Caulk cracks around windows, doors and other openings.

Five—Stop up air leaks of any kind you can find.

Six—Check the heating plant.

Seven—Clean the soot and fly ash from the heating surface inside your furnace or heating plant. This soot acts as an insulator and reduces efficiency as much as twenty-five percent.

Eight—Check air adjustment.

Nine—Keep the ash pit clean.

Ten—Keep the fire bed free from clinkers.

Eleven—Do not wet coal before burning it.

Twelve—Keep proper mixture of air and fuel at all times.

Thirteen—Keep a reasonable depth of ashes on the grate at all times.

Feed Coal Properly

Fourteen—Don't feed coal too slowly or too fast.

Fifteen—Don't attempt to regulate the fire by opening and shutting the ash pit door or the fire door. Use the dampers and draft control.

Sixteen—Don't fool yourself by thinking the daily or hourly changes of temperature can be compensated for by shifting the turn damper.

Seventeen—Don't shake the fire to pieces if you shake it and don't shake it unnecessarily.

Eighteen—Don't waste fuel by using coal too small or too large for your heater.

Nineteen—Don't use your furnace to burn garbage or rubbish.

Twenty—Avoid an over heated furnace or stove.

Twenty-one—If the draft is insufficient look to the chimney.

Twenty-two—Remember that proper humidity in the home makes possible lowered temperatures and consequent fuel savings.

Twenty-three—Check all radiators. Drain them and clean them out before you start the furnace. Are your registers well and properly located?

Twenty-four—Do not supply outside air to a warm air system.

Twenty-five—See that registers and air returns are unobstructed.

Twenty-six—Repack leaky radiator valves. If possible install modern air valves on steam radiators.

Twenty-seven—Purge all the air from your radiators.

Twenty-eight—Use ordinary oil paint on radiators. Aluminum or bronze paint reduces heating efficiency ten per cent. Oil paint does not.

Check Thermostat Controls

Twenty-nine—Check thermostat controls to see if they operate easily and at correct temperature.

Thirty—Check location of thermostat.

Thirty-one—Save fuel by lowering temperatures at night.

Thirty-two—If you expect to be away for the weekend lower temperatures as far as you can to prevent freezing and complete discomfort.

Thirty-three—Close off unused rooms.

Thirty-four—Don't try to heat sun rooms. They are heat wasters usually.

Thirty-five—Turn off heat when ventilating rooms. Don't leave the radiators on and throw the windows open at night. Cut the radiators off first. Your furnace won't heat the outside.

Thirty-six—Close fireplace draft and stop heat loss up the chimney. Thirty-seven—Don't heat your garage to living room temperature. Thirty-eight—Insulate your water heater. Thirty-nine—Check hot water faucets for leaks. Forty—Flush your hot water tank. Forty-one—Use your head. Take time to think. If you're not sure ask your coal dealer or heating engineer for advice. They know the importance of saving fuel and will give you sound advice and service. Forty-two—Appreciate the importance of coal and fuel in the war effort. Save fuel consistently and conscientiously. Every ounce saved puts the nation that much nearer to victory, peace and normalcy.

Two Youths Are Arrested Here For Car Theft

Pennsylvanians Apprehended after Apparent License Discrepancy

Two seventeen-year-old Pennsylvania youths were arrested by city police yesterday afternoon for theft of an automobile in Farmington, Pa., east of Uniontown, Pa., several hours earlier. A third youth reported to be in the car is still at large.

John J. Treiber, assistant chief of police, said last night the youths, one from Uniontown and one from Pittsburgh, have confessed to the theft, reported here by radio at 12:14 p. m. They are being held for action of Pennsylvania authorities.

The youths were arrested by Detective B. F. Gaffney and Officer Frank A. Shober at 3:45 p. m., more than an hour after the stolen car, a black Ford sedan, was discovered parked on Frederick street at the intersection with North George street, by Officer W. P. Crabtree.

Crabtree first noticed the car when Maryland license tags that had been attached to it did not correspond. A set of Pennsylvania license plates were on a seat inside the machine. The officer began an inquiry about the discrepancy in the Maryland tags and learned that the automobile was stolen. He was informed that three youths had gotten out of the car.

The automobile was locked. Inside were two cameras, three shirts, a raincoat and a trench coat, indicating, officers said, the youths had changed clothing.

Gaffney and Shober went to the car and after waiting more than an hour for the occupants to return had it towed to a local garage.

A short time after the automobile was removed the youths returned for it, were apprehended and taken to police headquarters. An unloaded 38 calibre revolver was taken from one of them.

Warren Hering, Farmington, owner of the car, came to Cumberland for his automobile last night, after personally searching for it here, in Hagerstown and as far away as Baltimore and Washington. The car had not been recovered when Hering was here earlier in the day.

During the search for the youths, Sgt. R. R. Johnson picked up two fourteen-year-old boys who had run away from their homes in Columbus, Ohio. They are being held here for their parents.

25,588 Fans See Redbirds Slice Leaders' Margin

Triumph Leaves Second-Place St. Louis 6 1-2 Games Behind

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 24 (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals flashed to a 7 to 1 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers tonight before 25,588 enthusiastic fans, slicing the league leaders' margin to six and one-half games.

Manager Bill Southworth's choice of left handed Max Lanier to hurl this first of a crucial four-game series with "Dem Buns" was an excellent one.

The stoical southpaw from the very first proved master of the contest. He allowed only one hit in the first seven innings, a double by Mickey Owen with two away.

The runner was left stranded when Riggs rolled weakly to Brown a minute later.

Lanier relaxed, temporarily, in the eighth when two hits, a single by Owen and a double by Riggs, gave Brooklyn its only center.

French, who suffered his second defeat was nipped for at least one single every inning, and the Redbirds bunched four safeties and a double steal to score three runs in the fourth.

U. of Mississippi Football Squad Needs Magician

Only 15 of 1941 Varsity Players Are Available to Coach Mehre

By ROMNEY WHEELER

OXFORD, Miss., Aug. 24—(Wide World)—University of Mississippi and big-time football will be coincidental.

Mississippi partisans like to brag that Harry Mehre always can pull something out of the bag—even if it's only the other side—but not even Mehre the magician can make football players grow where none grew before. And that's the sort of rabbits the Mississippi coach would have to pull out of his hat to have a winner this year.

To put it bleakly—and Mehre never speaketh otherwise—Mississippi's football squad has been picked to the bones...and the bones taken too. Of forty varsity players who played with Mississippi State here last November for the unofficial Southeastern Conference championship, only fifteen remain. Nine were graduated, including the famed "H-Boys," Merle Hapes and Junior Hovious. Sixteen others are in the army, navy or marine corps, or have taken war jobs.

All told, counting varsity men, reserves and freshmen who would have been eligible this year, Mississippi has lost twenty-seven undergraduates to armed services and war jobs. Except for a handful of untried sophomores, here is Mehre's entire squad:

Ends—Frank Thorpe and Ray Poole. Tackles—Bob Bernocchi and Oliver Poole. Guards—Oscar Britt, Hermit Jones, Dale Meyers, Dave Whitaker, Ed Webb. Centers—Dan Wood and George Fester. Quarterback—Jarrell Jones. Halfback—Dick Miller. Fullbacks—Bobby Yandell and Duke Green. Only Thorpe, Poole, Britt, Bernocchi, Wood, Yandell and Green can be rated as regulars.

What hurt most was loss of first-stringers who normally would have had another year or more of eligibility. Pep Bennett, starting blocking back, joined the naval air corps; Lee Castle, fullback, is in the army air corps. Bill Eubanks, all conference end, signed with the Marines; Jackie Plack, understudy to Hovious, was drafted; Ray Terrell, starting wingback and the team's ablest defensive man, joined the Marines; and so on.

From his coaching staff, Mehre has lost Vernon Catfish Smith, end coach, to the Army; Charles (Chuck) Jaskiwich, backfield coach, Weems O. Baskin, Jr., line coach, Jack Stuart, trainer and equipment manager, to the Navy.

Fort Hill High's Grid Coach Seeks Leave of Absence

Johnny Long Hopes To Continue Work at Kelly Engineering Company

Director of athletics and football coach at Fort Hill High the past five years, John J. Long announced yesterday he has applied to the Allegheny County Board of Education for a leave of absence to remain on the safety department staff at the Kelly-Springfield Engineering Company.

Charles L. Kopp, superintendent of schools, confirmed Long's statement but said he was unable to make any official comment at this time other than that the request had been referred to the proper state authorities for consideration.

Long, who developed strong football teams at Fort Hill, stressed that he is reluctant to leave the school system at this time. He said that continued association with boys in their teens, coaching and training them for rugged competition on the gridiron, would be his choice under normal conditions, but that he feels he will be making a more important contribution to the war program by remaining at the ordnance plant where he is engaged as an instructor in charge of first aid classes.

The granting of Long's request will complicate the football picture at Fort Hill by delaying the start of pre-season practice and bringing about a possible change in systems. Long planned to call out candidates about September 1 but if he doesn't return to the school, it probably will be necessary to defer formal practice until after the opening of the term on Tuesday, September 8.

A graduate of Allegheny high in 1924 and Catholic university in 1928, Long was an outstanding star in football, basketball and baseball throughout his scholastic and collegiate careers. He served as coach at LaSalle high here, Newman School at Lakewood, N. J., and Cathedral High of Trenton, N. J., before joining the Fort Hill faculty in 1937.

His 1940 football team won the Cumberland Valley Athletic League, city and sectional championships, while the 1941 eleven gave Allegheny a close race for the CVAL and city crowns.

Martin Locates An Enlightening Sports Picture

Snap of Boston Braves' Dugout Is Real Study of Indifference

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, Aug. 24 (Wide World)—We have just been studying one of the most enlightening sports pictures we have seen in a long time, trying to figure out whether or not what we saw has anything to do with the fact that the Boston Braves are running a strong seventh in the National League race.

It was a shot of the Braves dugout during a recent game with the New York Giants at the Polo Grounds. Eddie Miller was bounding down the steps just after hitting a home run, but if it were not for the picture caption you would have thought he had just come down with scarlet fever or had been chasing a pole cat, successfully.

You never saw such studied indifference in your life. The picture showed a line of knees on the bench, hammy hands draped over them passively. At the far corner of the steps a player was draped listlessly, gazing dubiously back toward the water cooler as if trying to make up his mind whether it was worth while to move and get a drink, or take a chance on the thirst passing over.

A little later another player sat on the steps, hands clasped over knees as he gazed broodingly at the dirt. At the near corner of the steps another athlete sat rubbing his chin pensively and staring out toward the diamond.

Standard Procedure
As far as his teammates were concerned Mr. Miller might have been a member of the firm of Miller, O'Brien and Miller, dealers in second-hand junk, instead of a guy who had just hit a home run for them.

There usually is a standard procedure when a fellow hits a home run. The third base coach grabs him by the hand as he trots around. The bat boy meets him a few feet from the plate with another hand-shake. The next batter stands across the plate with hand outstretched, and other players of the welcoming committee form a bucket line to the dugout. He's quite a guy.

But here is Eddie Miller, who might have been caught stealing from his mother as far as any joyous welcome from his teammates was concerned.

It is admitted the circumstances were slightly extenuating. The Braves were so far behind that a home run was just a raindrop in a meadow as far as catching up was concerned, and the Braves at the moment probably weren't in a jovial mood.

However, where was that come on, gang, let's go, never-say-die spirit which is supposed to permeate our major league clubs, from the Phils and Athletics on

Redskin Eleven Impresses Army All-Star Coach

Wallace Wade Skeptical over His Team's Chances in Sunday's Game

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 24 (AP)—Wallace Wade was never given to superlatives during his college coaching days, and he hasn't changed since taking over the reins of the Army's Western grid forces.

Major Wade took his first peep at the mighty Washington Redskins down at San Diego yesterday and summed up his impressions today in four words.

"They looked awful good," he said. "Wade's Army team plays the professional aggregation here next Sunday in the first of a series of army relief contests with pro clubs."

Passing Wills Praise
"I was tremendously impressed with the Redskins," he continued. "I didn't realize they would be so strong. They were remarkable. Their passing, led by Baugh, was almost unbelievable."

The wily tactician paused and added, "their ends were exceedingly fine in catching the passes. One of them, Krueger, looked great."

"Krueger? That must have been Al Krueger? I guess you remember him, don't you, Major?" the interviewer asked. Wade chuckled.

"I'll say I do."

Krueger, to go back a few years, was the end for Southern California who caught a touchdown pass in the final fifty seconds of the Rose Bowl game that defeated Wade's previously unbeaten, untied and unscored upon Duke eleven. That was on New Year's day of 1939.

Adjourn to Rose Bowl
"You're not ready to throw in the towel, are you, Major?"

"Well," Wade answered, "you know they have men who have been playing together two or three years and some of our boys met only a week ago. That makes quite a difference. We've been pretty doubtful all along about holding them."

So saying Wade and his staff adjourned to the Rose bowl to give the Army All-Stars a limbering up, plus more hard work in an afternoon session.

Former Major League Baseball Star Shows Movies

Members of the Police Boys' Club in camp on the South Branch of the Potomac river near Springfield, W. Va., gave "Lefty" Grove, former major league pitching star, a formal reception when he visited them last week.

Grove, who showed movies of his camping trip in the West and also some interesting baseball shots, was kept busy answering questions put to him by the boys, who are still talking about the show.

A canoe regatta drew an entry of four classes with Glen Brant and Herman Myers, competing in Class C, turning in the best time of two minutes and five seconds in the doubles. In the singles, Warren Squires toured the course in two minutes and twenty seconds in the Class A event. The summary:

Shut Out Won't Run In American Derby

CHICAGO, Aug. 24 (AP)—Shut Out was declared out of the $70,000 American derby today, leaving Saturday's rich race at Washington Park a one-horse show—Alsab being "the horse."

The winner of the Kentucky derby and the Travers stakes has turned stale, John A. Gaver, trainer of the Green tree stable star, said.

"Shut Out's work this morning was unsatisfactory," Gaver said, "apparently he has trained off and is in need of a letup."

The past tense is used with malice aforethought, Lieut. Comm. Jim Crowley himself thinks that after the war a football coach's job will be a full twelve-month affair, with the present eight months or so of pleasant, scientific loafing devoted to actual coaching.

And if you think that's going to be tough on the coaches, keep a little for the athletic directors, whom Crowley believes also will be called upon to do their bit toward a more universal physical training program.

Unless the athletic directors double in brass by coaching some sport on the side, they have about the sweetest job imaginable, drawing down boom wages for drawing up schedules, seeing that there are shoes and helmets enough to go around, and that there is a dry towel available to swab the dew from every manly torso in the locker room.

National Program Seen
Crowley—and he has plenty of company—thinks the present war caught the nation unprepared physically, with only the varsity athletes in the colleges in top condition, and then only if they were caught during the season of their particular sport.

He thinks that the present accent on physical fitness, as demonstrated in the navy's pre-flight schools, for example, will result in a national physical fitness program which will manifest itself in compulsory football and other body-building and toughening sports for every able-bodied grade school, high school and college student.

Football coaches, as well as all other coaches, will be coaching and teaching for the purpose of physical development alone, and not to win a bid to a bowl game or draw crowds sufficient to make the semi-annual payment on the stadium debt.

Crowley didn't say so, but the coaching schools conducted at the navy's four pre-flight camps seem to support his theory that athletics in the future will be more on the mass scale.

More than 700 high school and college coaches and physical education directors attended the four courses, and there is no doubt but that they went home with a new slant on this physical fitness business, and that they will make radical changes in their own programs.

Break for Coaches
In a way the concentration on the building up of all students instead of developing a few for varsity competition would be a break for the football coaches, who no longer would be chased toward the nearest exit by indignant alumni if the team failed to win its share of games.

In the past if a coach had a couple of character-building seasons in a row he might as well start looking at travel folders. Under the new setup he can build character every year, as the emphasis won't be on victory. Naturally, if a team wins the coach won't be reprimanded, but that won't be the general idea.

It will be tough on schools still deep in the heart of their stadium debts, but we have yet to see a college stadium torn down because it wasn't paid for, and the schools will find a way out.

At any rate, the coaches should be willing to increase their yearly labors from four months to twelve in exchange for the security offered. Just think, lose every game and not lose the job.

Even in getting his All-Stars set for the Bear test, Zupp still carries his memories of more than a few championship years. Also his memories of the famous Redhead who started all football by scoring four touchdowns against Michigan in the first nine minutes of his first Big Ten game.

There was also the afternoon when his often-beaten little Illinois squad moved to apparently hopeless slaughter against one of the greatest teams Minnesota ever had. Minnesota had crushed the conference and most of the conference had crushed Illinois. But on that particular afternoon it was Illinois that slipped through the biggest football upset of all time.

It was also just before that Minnesota game that Zupp began one of his famous pre-game talks to his small squad. Here was his opening outburst to an astonished group—

"I am Louis the Fourteenth and you are my court. After us, the deluge."

Using this as his theme in a series of blazing oratorical sorties, Zuppke had his team so steamed up by game time that Harmon could find no exits. He never had a chance as from four to six tacklers nailed him at the first step.

With Zuppke and Alsab both operating at the end of the week, Chicago won't have to look around for any additional color.

THE BIG WEEK

CHICAGO, Aug. 24 — This city is steamed up in advance for its big weekend just ahead.

On Friday night the College All-Stars meet Chicago's pennant-winning Bears for the Army-Navy fund with at least 100,000 spectators ready to get in motion toward the massive stadium.

On Saturday Alsab will make his big time re-entry in the $80,000 American derby with all the fleetness and stamina he knew at his early-season peak.

With these two big shows only a few days off you can understand the amount of fashionable chitchat you get in most of the sporting centers.

Football's 1942 Start

The All-Stars head-on collision with the Halas Bears Friday night will start football's 1942 season with a thundering rush.

There is already the substantial amount of $100,000 banked for the Army fund, with a Navy split coming in when the gate receipts are counted. This should mean at least $130,000 for the Army alone with another tidy cluster of green money for the Navy.

Two days later in Los Angeles there will be another Army Relief gathering when Major Wallace Wade sends his Western Army team against the Washington Redskins. This should mean close to another $100,000 collection of spectators for a highly worthy cause.

And it might be mentioned that in addition to the worthiness of the cause, these two tremendous crowds will see two great football games among four squads packed with talent.

Zupp's Last Stand

The All-Star game in Chicago may also be the last football stand of Robert C. Zuppke, one of the most famous and most colorful coaches in football history.

The former Illinois director and guide, who has turned in his college harness, still has the same keen imagination and the same busy tongue he used for so many years for the Orange and the Blue.

Zupp has been looking with wistful eyes at the material he has been handling the last few weeks. Just a few of these backs would have made a large difference at Illinois which lacked the man power held by such teams as Minnesota, Michigan and Notre Dame. A Bob Westfall or a Bruce Smith would have helped Zupp recall the days of Red Grange when the Galloping Ghost was at his best.

60,000 Expected To See Baltimore Army Relief Game

Tickets Go on Sale Tomorrow for Eastern All-Stars-Dodgers Clash

BALTIMORE, Aug. 24 (AP)—The Army Emergency Relief Fund may realize $75,000 or more from the Baltimore football game between the Eastern Army All-Stars now in training at New Haven, Conn., and the Brooklyn Dodgers of the National Professional League.

The teams will meet at Municipal stadium the night of Sept. 16.

General chairman of the arrangements committee, Wallace J. Smith, set this figure today, adding "I am confident that we'll achieve that goal. Public response is very encouraging and we expect to fill the stadium for the game."

Tickets are to go on sale at two downtown and eight neighborhood agencies Wednesday, Smith said, and are to be distributed on a strict "first come, first served basis."

Two prices have been set for seats in the 60,000 capacity stadium, Smith continued. On the sides of the playing field between the goal posts they will command $2.21 while those beyond the end zones will bring $1.11.

Mail orders, Smith said, are to be filled in the order received.

"We intend to fill every seat in the stadium," Smith said. "By that I mean that there will be no free tickets given out. Everybody on our various committees has agreed to pay his own way to the game and we want to make that apply all the way down the line."

Col. Robert (Bob) Neyland, former coach of crack University of Tennessee football teams, is tutoring the Army All-Stars on the Yale campus.

Majors Surpass War Relief Goal

Unofficial Total of $517,964.11 Raised for Army and Navy Funds

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (AP)—The major baseball leagues have gone over the top in their contributions to war relief funds.

The majors had set $500,000 as their goal for the Army and Navy funds from games played in each of the leagues' parks. A compilation by the Associated Press today showed that an unofficial total of $517,964.11 had been raised. The compilation was based on official figures from all of the National League games and seven of the American circuit's contests. The New York Yankees, who played their relief games yesterday, have not completed the auditing of their receipts.

In addition the All-Star game at the Polo Grounds and the tussle at Cleveland between the American League and armed services yielded $100,000 for the majors' ball and bat fund and approximately another $50,000 for Army and Navy relief.

There was also the afternoon when his often-beaten little Illinois squad moved to apparently hopeless slaughter against one of the greatest teams Minnesota ever had. Minnesota had crushed the conference and most of the conference had crushed Illinois. But on that particular afternoon it was Illinois that slipped through the biggest football upset of all time.

It was also just before that Minnesota game that Zupp began one of his famous pre-game talks to his small squad. Here was his opening outburst to an astonished group—

"I am Louis the Fourteenth and you are my court. After us, the deluge."

Using this as his theme in a series of blazing oratorical sorties, Zuppke had his team so steamed up by game time that Harmon could find no exits. He never had a chance as from four to six tacklers nailed him at the first step.

With Zuppke and Alsab both operating at the end of the week, Chicago won't have to look around for any additional color.

After the war you, too, can enjoy economical gas heat... if you don't have it now!

Regardless of what fuel you now use, proper insulation will give you substantial savings year after year. If you do not now enjoy the modern convenience of automatic gas heat, you will probably have to wait till the war is over. But if you act now to install insulation, storm windows, storm doors and weatherstripping, then—when gas heat is available for heating—you, too, can heat your home this modern way—at rock-bottom cost.

Cut your heating costs this winter

These 3 ways

You can count on these results:

Insulation

In winter you'll find your home easier to heat. In summer you'll find all rooms 10° to 15° cooler. Conservative estimates show that simple roof insulation or "capping" job—properly installed—can save 15 to 25 per cent of heating cost—and side wall insulation will increase this saving. Some home owners show insulation savings ranging up to 30 per cent.

Storm windows and doors

An important saving in your fuel bill can be made in this way, the actual saving depending of course on the size and number of windows and doors and the number exposed to cold winds. By creating an air cushion between two panes of glass, it takes less fuel to keep rooms at even temperature. Conservative estimates are that you can save 11 to 18 per cent of total heating bill—every year.

Weatherstripping

Important savings can be made by weatherstripping and caulking. When you stop cold air from entering you maintain more even room temperature and save fuel. Savings often amount to 15 per cent of your heating bill. As in the case of insulation and storm windows, all these steps to reduce heat losses in your home can make an undersized heating plant efficient enough to supply winter comfort for the whole house.

1. Insulate your house against heat losses, saving money for yourself and saving fuel for the war effort as well. Note how melted snow on roof indicates how an uninsulated house heats all outside.

2. Install storm windows and doors, neither of which is restricted by priorities. When properly fitted, they can cut your heat losses considerably.

3. Weatherstrip your windows and doors, thus cutting heat losses from drafts that make it hard to keep your home at the right temperature for health.

PREFER ONE CHANCE
IN PLANNING the play of a hand, you may see two alternative moves to gain tricks, each of which is an even money or 50-50 chance. But, if one of those chances, in case it succeeds, will produce only about one trick gain and the other can be worth several tricks, if it works, there is not much argument about which to choose. Furthermore, the situation may be such that, after trying one chance, you may still attempt the other, whereas trying them in reverse order may not be possible.

Twelve Division Parade Friday Will Highlight Legion Convention Here

Twelve divisions, headed by eight drum and bugle corps units and four bands, will comprise the marching order of the Maryland Department American Legion convention parade scheduled for Friday evening at 7 o'clock. It was announced yesterday by Thomas F. Conlon, grand marshal.

The drum and bugle corps of Kelly-Mansfield Post, American Legion, of Piedmont, W. Va., was the eighth and final musical unit to accept an invitation to participate.

Conlon announced that the various marching units will start forming at 6 p. m., at the points assigned to them and an hour later the parade will get under way.

Two band prizes of $30 and $20 will be offered.

The reviewing stand will be located on Baltimore street near the Second National bank. Judges will be scattered along the route and there will be checkers to verify that all complete the march to Salem street where the command to disband will be given.

Commissions Are Granted to Six Company G Men

Five Selectees among 26 Now in Officers' School, Capt. Millholland Says

Since Company G, of Cumberland, formerly of the Maryland National Guard, was inducted into the regular army on February 3, 1941, six non-commissioned officers have been commissioned second lieutenants and twenty-six members of the company have since been appointed to officers' training schools where they will be eligible for commissions upon graduation.

This information is contained in a letter received last evening by The Cumberland News from Capt. Randolph Millholland, of Company G. One Hundred and Fifteenth Infantry, now stationed in Camp Blending, Fla.

"For some time past," Capt. Millholland wrote, "I have thought that it might be interesting to the people of Cumberland to hear what Company G has done toward providing officer personnel for our expanding army since we were inducted February 3, 1941.

Record Is Above Average
"Our record of men received by the army and men appointed to Officers' Training Schools is quite a bit above the average. As a matter of fact, it is the highest of any company that I have heard of. Consequently, I take a great deal of pride in that record and I think it will be a source of pride to every patriotic Cumberlander.

"When Company G was inducted into the Army of the United States the following named non-commissioned officers had reached such a state of training through diligent work and study that they were automatically commissioned into the army as second lieutenants:

Sgt. John P. Kriener, Sgt. Wilcox W. Sellers, Sgt. Carl R. Senkell, Sgt. Melvin W. Rice, Sgt. Edgar A. Teter and Corp. Howard H. Dickey.

21 Seek Commissions
"The following named members of the company have since been appointed to Officers' Training Schools and after three months' intensive training have been or will be commissioned as second lieutenants in the Army of the United States upon graduating from these schools:

Selectees Go to School
Capt. Millholland also stated that from the first group of selectees which Company G received in the summer of 1941, those appointed to Officers' Training Schools include Corp. Charles H. Jacobs, Corp. John R. Long, Corp. Clyde H. Baden, Corp. Floyd A. Everett and Corp. Edward J. Slaba.

"Since our induction, members of the company have been transferred to many different arms and services," Capt. Millholland continued. "In fact at the present time, they are in many of the far corners of the world. You may be sure that all of these boys are greatly missed in the present company, but it is nice to know that Cumberland's company has done more than its share in contributing to the leadership of our army in this greatest of all wars."

In conclusion Capt. Millholland stated that even though many members of Company G are not Cumberlanders there is always a mad scramble to get one of the Cumberland papers when they arrive. "I shouldn't be surprised if, after the war, the Cumberland papers will have new subscribers from all over the country. We still enjoy reading the home news."

Instructions Are Given on Mailing Christmas Parcels to Armed Forces

Complete Information Can Be Obtained at Post Office Shriver Says

Parents, wives, sisters, sweethearts and friends of men serving overseas with United States armed forces should plan now what they expect to send them for Christmas, James C. Shriver, local postmaster, said yesterday.

The local post office has received complete instructions from the third assistant postmaster general as to the time such mail should be dispatched, size and weight of the package and preparation of the package to withstand the long distances it will be shipped.

Christmas parcels and cards should be mailed during the period from October 1 to November 1, the earlier the better, Shriver stated. In view of the urgent need for shipping space to transport materials directly essential to the war effort, Christmas parcels should not exceed eleven pounds in weight or eighteen inches in length.

The War and Navy departments urge that the public co-operate by sending parcels which do not weigh in excess of six pounds and restricting the size of the package to that of an ordinary shoe box.

Both the army and navy have pointed out that members of the armed forces are amply provided with food and clothing and the public is urged not to send such articles in the parcels. Only one package per week will be accepted for mailing to any one person.

Owing to the great distances this mail must travel and the handling it must undergo, it is absolutely necessary that all packages be in substantial boxes or containers. Addresses must be legible. Parcels addressed to overseas personnel should show, in addition to the name and address of the sender, the name, rank, army serial number, branch of service, organization, A.P.O. number of the addressee and the post office through which the mail is routed.

Anyone wishing further information concerning sending Christmas mail to a soldier or sailor can secure it at the post office.

Some of the pellets hit Metz in the side, he testified, and Slider yelled: "Get going, or I'll shoot again." Metz said they left and he was treated by a physician at Paw Paw, after which he obtained a warrant for Slider.

Slider admitted at the hearing that he served a sentence many years ago for assault and once had been arrested for carrying a concealed weapon.

Alonzo Slider, 63, was released under $1,000 bond yesterday in trial magistrates' court for action of the October grand jury on a charge of assault with intent to kill Lloyd Metz, 26, of this city.

Slider operates a roadside restaurant on the Uhl highway near Paw Paw, W. Va. It is named "The Hot Spot" and for a short time last Wednesday afternoon it lived up to its name.

Metz told the court he is an employee of the B. and O. railroad and along with his foreman, Peter Haney, they stopped at the place after midnight. Another motorist had just bought some gasoline there and a sign stated "Open All Night" so they asked for some sandwiches.

Brick Company Employees Will Return To Work

Agreement Reached between Firm and Members of UCW Union

Employees of the Union Mining Company's brick yards and clay mines at Mt. Savage, Barreilleville and Ellerslie, voted yesterday to return to work this morning after an agreement was reached in a difference between the company and the union.

About 425 employees, all members of Local 193 United Construction Workers Union, left their jobs Saturday morning after the company had refused to re-employ twelve men furloughed or discharged at the Ellerslie plant.

According to members of the union there had been discrimination shown in the furlough of these twelve workmen because they had voted in favor of forming a union at the Ellerslie plant recently reopened.

Conciliator Arrives
The company contended that the men had been furloughed because there was no work for them.

L. J. Smith, conciliator for the United States Department of Labor met with the union and company officials yesterday. Smith said last night the company agreed to let the men return to their jobs and to show no discrimination against members of the union. Several other differences were discussed and satisfactorily agreed upon, Smith explained. Among these was the discharge of a man last March. He was offered his job by the company yesterday.

Another grievance was the practice of the company of laying men off for a week if they failed to report for work. The members of the union said it was not a general practice but one that applied to "some individuals."

An agreement was reached between the union and the company providing that men should not stay away from work unless because of illness, death in family or some other legitimate reason. The company will send men home for a day for a first offense, three days for a second offense and a week for a third offense with the possibility of dismissal.

UCW Official Attends
Smith also explained that certain arbitration agreements were decided upon and that the union members and the company seemed to be in perfect agreement and harmony.

Peter Ferra, Indiana, Pa., regional director of Western Pennsylvania for the UCW and James Collins, local general organizer for the union, also attended the conference.

Decorators Dress Up Buildings and Streets For Legion Convention

John Kliffner and his corps of decorators are busily engaged in dressing up the buildings while W. Murray Cordry is supervising the street decorating work.

C. William Teubner is chairman of the decorations committee for the convention.
